Sea Research Centre May Go to Vancouver

City Favored In Early Study

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Vancouver appears to have the edge over Victoria as the site of a major oceanographic institute, it was learned today.

A survey two years ago proposed that Victoria is the more logical location on the basis of logistics involving best use of research ships and also that the fisheries biological station is located at Nanaimo.

But today, W. M. Cameron, director of the marine sciences branch, in Ottawa said location of an institute near scientific and "particularly marine industries" is more important than immediate proximity to its ships.

Dr. Cameron's statement came on the heels of a recommendation by the Science Council of Canada Wednesday that urgent priority by given creation of a West Coast counterpart of the Bedford Oceanographic Institute near Halifax.

A study by federal government agencies during the coming year will decide the proposed research centre's location and size, said Cameron.

The government has begun development of a Canada Centre for Inland Waters at Burlington, Ont., which amalgamates multi-disciplinary personnel into a new type of centre involving water, weather, pollution, economic, hydrographic and even social science experts.

Involve All Facets of Research

This greatly-expanded type of institute is now being considered for the West Coast, undertaking all facets of research connected with fresh and salt water on the Pacific and western Arctic Ocean coasts as well as deep-sea research.

Dr. Cameron said such a centre might find its location near scientific "and particularly marine industries" more important than immediate proximity to its ships.

"Besides two universities and the oceanographic group at the University of B.C., the Vancouver area has the full range of marine industries which would be extremely important to a multi-disciplinary centre and Victoria has almost none," he said.

"This is one of the things that will have to be looked into pretty closely over the next year."

The government already has pulled about a dozen fisheries experts from Nanaimo to temporary quarters in Vancouver Harbor while awaiting hard decisions on the West Coast program, which was to follow completion of the $25 million inland waters centre at Burlington in 1972.

From Okanagan to St. John River

The Burlington centre ultimately will accommodate up to 1,000 staff scientists and technicians, visiting professors and students undertaking research into such questions as the cost-benefit ratio of various municipal sewage treatment techniques to documenting stream flow rates.

It's area of operations would cover the interior from the Okanagan Lakes to the St. John River and from the Mackenzie Delta to the U.S. boundary.

It has been operating since its creation two years ago out of 50 mobile trailers at Burlington. The first of the permanent complex of four major buildings was officially opened last week. The trailer laboratories will be re-used for field studies.

The original intent was to begin serious planning of a West Coast institute after the Burlington centre was finished — providing a lead time of about five years for its development. Expansion of the Bedford Institute into a multi-disciplinary complex was to follow.

But the science council's recommendation urged drastic speed-up of the West Coast project as part of a massive increase in marine programs.

Dr. Cameron said the impending study will have to determine whether this is feasible. It also will have to examine such questions as the exact scope of disciplines and geography to be assigned to the West Coast institute and how to fit it into the government re-organization involved in establishing a department of environmental affairs.

'HE REFUSED TO CO-OPERATE'

RCMP Quizzing Doctor

By STEVE HUME

A Canadian doctor being questioned in connection with the Pachena Bay murder of Gordon Kralt has so far refused to talk to three RCMP detectives, San Francisco police said today.

"He refused to co-operate with them yesterday. Whether he will co-operate with them today remains to be seen," a San Francisco police official said in a telephone interview.

He said Dr. Glen Stewart, 43, who had been living in a San Francisco apartment under the name of Campbell since Nov. 10, is being held in the city prison.

"The charge is: hold for immigration authorities, but he is being questioned by three RCMP detectives."

Two of the RCMP officers have been identified as Cpl. M. H. Nelson and Const. William Erickson. The third officer is a Prince Rupert sergeant investigating the disappearance of a British Columbia woman, according to a police spokesman in that city.

The police official said he had no information to verify or deny reports that U.S. immigration authorities intended to escort Stewart to the Canadian border and turn him over to RCMP.

"We're still trying to find out what they intend to do ourselves," he said.

Stewart tried to kill himself Tuesday when two immigration inspectors arrived at his apartment in an attempt to determine whether he was lawfully in the United States.

The doctor slammed and barricaded his door and tried to gas himself and a woman companion, 31-year-old Maria Trigiani, by turning on the kitchen stove and breaking off the controls.

The two were rescued by the immigration men who broke into the apartment through a window.

Kralt, 23-year-old caretaker at the Shantyman's Christian Association camp on Pachena Bay, dropped from sight Oct. 23. His decomposed body was found Sunday 600 yards from the lodge where he lived.

The former Duncan resident apparently was shot to death.

CLAIM BY HANOI

Raiders Missed Cells

SAIGON (UPI) — Hanoi Radio warned today that the United States "will have to bear the full responsibility for the lives of the American pilots" in any commando raids on prisoner of war camps in North Vietnam.

Broadcasts by the official North Vietnamese radio monitored in Saigon claimed again that a "number" of captured American pilots were wounded in last weekend's raid. The broadcasts revived speculation that the 50-man commando team that landed in the Son Tay POW compound may have missed cells where the Americans were being held by several hundred yards or less.

Spokesmen in Saigon refused to comment on the broadcast in keeping with normal U.S. policy.

One broadcast said that "U.S. warplanes bomb-strafed the city of Son Tay, killing 10 civilians and wounding seven others. Specifically, an air pirate prisoner camp was severely hit by shells, bullets and bombs and a number of pirates wounded."

Five at Large After Prison Break

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — Eleven prisoners escaped from Prince Albert penitentiary Wednesday night and five described as dangerous were still at large today.

It was the second mass escape from the penitentiary in three months. Seven men escaped Aug. 24 but all were recaptured.

Three men involved in the August escape were among those who fled Wednesday night — Robert Desjarlais, 28, Douglas Letendre, 26, and Wilfred Eadie, 22. Desjarlais remained at large, while the other two were recaptured along with Stanley Whittaker, 25, Harry Lewis, 24, and Peter Harrison, 31.

The five were arrested at an RCMP roadblock 20 miles south of the city.

Ronald Twerdoclib, 19, who was serving a life sentence for murder, surrendered today.

The five still at large all have long criminal records filled with violence, Warden John Norfield said.

Desjarlais, of Lac La Biche, Alta., was serving a life sentence for non-capital murder and two years for escaping lawful custody in the Aug. 24 break.

Mickey Hleboff, 25, Kamsack, Sask.; Ralph Cochrane, 43, Vancouver; George Leclerce, 30, Montreal, and Hubert Bollmann, 37, Edmonton, were also still at large.

Hleboff was serving an indefinite term.

Bail Reply Next Week

MONTREAL (CP) — A bail application by lawyer Robert Lemieux, charged with seditious conspiracy and membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec, was taken under advisement today until next week.

Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay of Court of Queen's Bench told Lemieux: "I will do my best to render a decision by the beginning of next week."

But he added later that he will accept additional written arguments from Lemieux until Tuesday.

Police Guarding Red Offices

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Soviet diplomatic and commercial buildings were under heavy guard by police today after a bomb blast at the Manhattan office of the Soviet airline Aeroflot.

Federal agents and police also tightened security around Aeroflot planes and at terminals at Kennedy International Airport and airports in Washington.

Because of the words "never again" used by an anonymous person who telephoned two news agencies after the bomb blast, suspicion centred on the Jewish Defence League, a militant group of young Jews who have been protesting alleged persecution of Jews in the Soviet Union.

The blast knocked out huge plate glass windows on both floors of the building, which houses the offices of Aeroflot and of Intourist, the Soviet tourist agency.

AGED CARDINALS HIT BACK AT POPE

ROME (UPI) — Two cardinals barred from any future role in governing the Roman Catholic Church because of age hit back today at Pope Paul VI. One implied the pontiff was a sick man.

French Cardinal Eugene Tisserant, 86, dean of the 127-man College of Cardinals, said it was "public knowledge" the Pope was so feeble or ill eight days ago that aides had to help him from his weekly general audience in St. Peter's Basilica.

Italian Cardinal Alfredo Ottaviani, 80, former head of the Vatican department for the Doctrine of the Faith (the former holy office), accused the pope of contemptuously overriding church tradition barring from Vatican administrative duties Cardinals who have passed the age of 80.

Bennett Says PM 'Caused Crisis'

Times News Services

Premier Bennett today lashed out at Prime Minister Trudeau, blaming him for "Canada's greatest crisis" in Quebec.

It was Bennett's first real statement on the recent wave of terrorism in Quebec and it came in angry response to a report that Trudeau had told B.C. Liberals that the way to stop the flooding of the Skagit Valley is to fire Bennett.

Asked about the report on his way to cabinet today, Bennett snapped:

"Oh yes, Mr. Trudeau knows full well that he and his Liberals made an awful mess in the province of Quebec and created Canada's greatest crisis.

WILD STATEMENTS

"I give him credit for the action he took when things got desperate but he is to blame for that and these kind of wild statements by Trudeau are just to take the attention of the Canadian people and the people of British Columbia. . . ."

Asked what Trudeau should have done to avoid a crisis in Quebec, Bennett replied:

"Well the situation is this — his policies have been like driving a horse with the whip in one hand and the reins in the other, the one hand not knowing what the other doeth, trying to spend money in Quebec at the same time creating tight money, high interest rates and killing employment.

"The very fact that he created unemployment made for conditions in Quebec and led to this difficulty."

Armies of Beggars Steal Aid Supplies

BHOLA (Reuter) — The official casualty toll in the cyclone and tidal wave disaster which struck East Pakistan two weeks ago rose to 200,000 as relief workers coped today with a new problem — armies of ragged beggars stealing supplies destined for survivors.

The beggars are descending on the coastal strip ravaged by the wind and wall of water which hit it Nov. 13, grabbing food and blankets being delivered for the starving survivors. Flat-bottomed British and American boats began ferrying the supplies to the stricken area Wednesday.

The official fatality toll of 200,000 included more than 175,000 confirmed dead and nearly 25,000 missing and presumed dead. On the shattered island of Bhola, President Yahya Khan spent the night after a day-long tour of the worst hit areas, himself handing out food and blankets to sobbing men, women and children.

Yahya heard the martial law administrator of the government demand immediate trials of officials who he said have been charging money to victims of the storm before food is delivered.

"We are doing our damnedest," said Yahya.

Egyptians 'On Alert'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The newspaper Al Jarida reported today that Egypt has put its land, air and naval forces on maximum alert to face a "warlike" Israeli buildup of troops and armor east of the Suez Canal.

The newspaper's Cairo correspondent said the Israeli buildup was revealed by recent Egyptian spy flights over the Sinai Desert.

The paper quoted a senior Egyptian government source as saying the ceasefire along the canal "is now passing through its most critical hours."

Victorians Sympathetic To Change

Victoria interests were charitable today toward indications from Ottawa that the proposed oceanographic institute may be located in Vancouver, instead of here as originally planned.

David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, noted that the government had promised on three separate occasions that Victoria would be site of the institute.

"But if, as indicated, the institute in its final form is a much bigger project than originally planned, there may be good reasons for considering a new site as well," Anderson said.

MONEY ISSUE

"If there are reasons, like saving the Canadian taxpayers money, I'll listen to them." He said Victoria already is beneficiary of "lots" of federal spending, while Vancouver has "very, very little."

Uvic biologist Dr. Mark Bell said the decision to make the institute a vastly enlarged, multi-disciplinary centre was an encouraging development.

"In a venture of this magnitude, you have to go where the talent is," Bell said. "As nice as it would be to have the institute associated with our university, it may be necessary to deny parochial views in the national interest.

BOON TO CANADA

"Such an enlarged institute would be a boon generally to Canada and the West."

Biology department head Dr. Gordon Fields said he would be disappointed if the government decides on Vancouver, after preliminary studies had strongly recommended the Esquimalt harbor area.

"We know that the Bedford Institute (the operating Nova Scotia prototype of what is planned for B.C.) has provided strong support for oceanographic and related work at Dalhousie University in Halifax," Fields said.

"We had hoped for similar co-operative development here." There are two biolo-

Rhodesia Copies Apartheid

SALISBURY (Reuter) — The Rhodesian government announced today details of a controversial apartheid-style bill allowing for the banishment of non-whites from white residential areas.

The new legislation also will — for the first time in Rhodesia's history — provide for setting up an official South African-type classification tribunal to decide a person's race.

Publication of the long-awaited bill by Premier Ian Smith's government dealt another heavy blow to slender hopes that new contacts between London and Salisbury could make any progress toward a settlement of the Anglo-Rhodesian independence deadlock.

Rhodesia broke away from Britain over British insistence of majority rule in a predominantly-black country, and proclaimed its independence Nov. 11, 1965. Rhodesia severed its links with the Crown last year when it became a republic.

HICKEL TOOK JOB 'TOO SERIOUSLY'

Ecologists Horrified by Firing

MORTON

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Conservationists who were horrified at the appointment of Walter J. Hickel as interior secretary two years ago were even more horrified Wednesday when President Nixon abruptly fired him — after Hickel refused to resign.

The official White House explanation, after a half-hour meeting between the president and Hickel, was a lack of "mutual confidence."

Environment-minded observers in Congress and conservation groups put a more specific interpretation on it: Hickel took his job seriously, was too independent, and so became a maverick in the Nixon administration.

NEW APPOINTMENT

There was little comment, however, on the president's announced intention to appoint Representative Rogers C. B. Morton of Maryland, chairman of the Republican national committee, to the interior post.

Authoritative sources here said Morton had known for more than a week that he would be the next secretary of interior. The towering (6-foot-7) congressman conferred with both President Nixon and Attorney General John Mitchell early last week and came away "90 per cent certain" that he would be taking over the interior post.

Hickel, in a brief statement, said in effect he found it impossible to play the White House kind of game.

Ronald Ziegler, White House press secretary, said of the sudden firing:

Spoiler Activated By Officer

By DENNIS BELL

TORONTO (CP) — The first officer of a doomed Air Canada jet liner apologized three times to the pilot, apparently for prematurely deploying the aircraft's spoiler system minutes before the jet smashed into a farm field July 5, killing all 109 persons aboard.

A transcript of what was said in the cockpit in the final minutes of California Galaxie Flight 621 was read into the record of a federal inquiry today by commission counsel B. J. MacKinnon.

The transcript was made from the DC-8-63 liner's flight recorder. It included the voices of Capt. Peter Hamilton, first officer Donald Rowland, second officer Harry Hill and ground control at Toronto International Airport.

The big jetliner lost two engines and most of its right wing after bounding off a runway from a height of 60 feet.

After runway impact, Capt. Hamilton attempted to circle the airport for a second landing approach. However, three explosions tore the jet's right wing apart and sent it nose first into a farmer's field north of the airport.

SLOWS PLANE

The ground spoilers system is a braking device of steel panels along the wings which, when deployed to an upright position, slow and steady a landing aircraft.

In this case, the spoilers were deployed while the jet liner, bound for Los Angeles from Montreal with a short stop in Toronto, was still in the air.

Sixteen seconds before the jet slammed into the field First Officer Rowland said over the cockpit intercom:

"Pete, sorry."

An explosion followed.

"All right," replied the captain.

"We've got an explosion," Capt. Hamilton said, 11 seconds before final impact.

"Oh, gosh . . ."

The last communication from the aircraft was one of the officers saying four seconds before it crashed:

"We've lost a wing."

The first indication of trouble came about three minutes before the plane crashed.

"No! No! No!," said the captain, a split-second after the ground spoilers were deployed.

A number of communications, most of them in technical terms, followed between the cockpit and Toronto ground control.

The captain told ground control:

"Oh, we'll go around again. I think we'll go straight around.

"Get the gear up please, Don."

About two minutes before final impact the control tower asked flight 621:

"OK, sir, your intentions, please."

"First, we would like to circle back for another approach on Runway 32," first officer Rowland replied.

"Runway 32 is closed due to debris on the runway," answered the control tower, which gave the aircraft a new heading for a different approach.

Second officer Hill, who was quiet through most of the final few minutes, asked for a fuel check twice before he got an answer.

The answer was garbled.

Capt. Hamilton, a veteran of 30 years flying, also tried to shut down systems to the lost No. 4 engine.

But apparently the effort was unsuccessful.

"The whole thing is jammed," said the captain.

Pope En Route To Far East, Stops in Iran

TEHRAN (AP) — Pope Paul, first pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church to visit Iran, landed for a brief stop today on his flight to Asia and the Pacific.

He was welcomed at Tehran's Mehrabad Airport by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi, Premier Amir Abass Hoveida, the cabinet and presidents of the two houses of parliament.

The Pope was cheered by 2,000 representatives of 500,000 Iranian Catholics and other Christian minorities in this largely Moslem land.

The Pope left Rome for a 10-day journey to Asia and the Pacific amid criticism from many Roman Catholics and concern over his health.

The shah stayed with the Pope during his whole stop and saw him off as he departed. The crowd cheered the Pontiff as he waved to them before entering his plans.

The shah and his prime minister and cabinet ministers held private discussions with the Pope as he rested in the royal pavillion of Mehrabad Airport.

Shadow Mischief

. . . RCMP

No charges have been laid against Stewart in connection with the murder, but Port Alberni RCMP said the man is wanted by them under a bench warrant issued Tuesday.

They said Stewart skipped bail while awaiting trial in Port Alberni on a charge of possession of stolen property over $50.

RCMP said the charge involved a life-raft worth $500 which was stolen from a university biological station at Bamfield, about four miles north of Pachena Bay.

Stewart pleaded not guilty to the charge in October and was free on $2,500 cash bail.

He was described as a "nomadic" type by RCMP, roaming from port to port and living in his 35-foot yacht Gypsy.

Stewart had been in the Port Alberni area for several months before leaving by boat for the United States in late October.

RAN AGROUND

The Gypsy ran aground and sank off the mouth of the Columbia River Nov. 7, and U.S. Coast Guard records show the rescue of Stewart, Miss Trigiani, Susan Whitehouse of Saanichton, and Richard Thompson of Surrey, England. Police were also seeking Miss Whitehouse and Thompson for questioning.

They are looking for a white, 1964 Volkswagen, licence number BHD-856.

Divers were still active today in an underwater search for the car at points along the coast south of Pachena Point north to the Alberni Inlet.

They are searching the sea bottom at all possible places where the car might have been driven or pushed into the water.

RCMP said they believe Kralt was shot with a "large calibre" gun, although advanced decomposition made it difficult for the corner to give an exact cause of death.

It is believed Kralt had been dead for three weeks before the body was found. Decomposition was so extensive that positive identification of the body was only made by examining dental work.

FOUND BULLET

Police said they have one vital concrete clue they are investigating. They discovered a bullet in the laundry room in the main hall of the building where Kralt is believed to have been shot.

RCMP declined to elaborate.

Stewart is still licensed to practise medicine in B.C. and it is reported he lived at Courtenay and practised at Comox and Cumberland during 1963 and 1964. He later practised at Sicamous, but left there in 1968.

A spokesman for the fishing village of Bamfield said today a boat which was identified by police as the Gypsy had been in and out of the Bamfield area all summer.

"It didn't have a name on it. The owner was known to us as a Dr. Quinn," he said.

crisis last month, Bennett declined to comment on the grounds it was a federal matter. At the Social Credit convention earlier this month, he urged delegates to be "very tolerant" of the people of Quebec at this time.

But Bennett told the convention the Trudeau government should be defeated because of its policy of fighting inflation by creating unemployment.

Trudeau's suggestion that Bennett should be defeated to stop the Skagit flooding was reported by Dave Brousson, Liberal MLA for Vancouver-Capilano, at the Liberal convention in Ottawa last weekend. (See also Page 26.)

OTHER COMMENTS

In other comments on the Quebec situation:

● Rene Levesque warned Wednesday night that if Quebec's political and economic structures are not replaced in two to five years the province "will suffer through a period of more repression, more tension and then anarchy."

The leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois told about 1,200 persons at a Montreal rally called to defend civil liberties under the War Measures Act: "I'm not a prophet, but I can see what's happening to Quebec."

He said Quebec's problems are "to great and too widespread" to be solved by "patchwork" and propaganda from the provincial and federal governments.

● In Vancouver Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said today the Liberal government has ducked its responsibilities in the Quebec terrorist situation.

MUST BE INFORMED

In a speech to a joint luncheon of the Men's Canadian Club and the Kiwanis Club, Stanfield said the government "must inform the Canadian people" about what was going on in Quebec when it decided to use the War Measures Act.

The Conservative leader blistered the Trudeau government for denying the people information on which a valid judgment of government actions could be made.

● New laws aimed at quelling Quebec terrorists should have been applied years ago, Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said Wednesday in North Bay.

"If the government had acted last year as it did six weeks ago, Laporte would not be dead and Cross would not be kidnapped," Caouette told a Chamber of Commerce meeting.

He said he intends to tell the House the temporary public order bill "is not severe enough for those assassins and those kidnappers."

POLICE HIT UNLIGHTED BICYCLISTS

The increased number of bicyclists in Victoria has brought a crackdown by city police on night riders without lights.

Inspector Richard Berry said today an average of two or three cyclists a night are stopped for unlit bikes. The fine is $10.

He said both adults and juveniles are offenders. The adults are subject to the fine while the juveniles must appear in juvenile court.

The bylaw, he noted, states that bicycles must be ridden with lights one hour after sunset.

noted that the terms of the new legislation appear to cut directly across at least two of the five settlement principles laid down by the British, which relate to ending racial discrimination and to racially retrogressive legislation.

Under provisions of the bill, 15 house owners of a majority race in any suburb may apply to the local authority for the area to be declared exclusively theirs should another race infiltrate.

If an investigator finds that racial disharmony and a depreciation in property values has been caused by the infiltration, then the local authority will give three months notice to "excluded persons" to quit their homes.

Almost unnoticed in the furore over Hickel's dismissal was the fact Morton will become the first interior secretary from an eastern state in the department's 121-year history — an indication of its modern evolution from a western landlord to a nationwide resource manager.

Hickel, then governor of Alaska, was viewed with suspicion by conservationists when he arrived in Washington as Nixon's nominee to the interior post in December, 1968.

Widely viewed as a "resource-exploiter and a pawn of oil interests," Hickel was questioned for days by the Senate interior committee and was the last cabinet mamber confirmed.

But former opponents have changed their minds and now express admiration for Hickel's efforts to protect the environment.

And Hickel's aide, Sam Love, 23, said young people had been impressed with Hickel's now-famous letter to the president following the U.S. incursion into Cambodia last spring, urging the president to pay greater heed to the voice of youth.

That letter, whose rapid leak to the press probably contributed to Hickel's downfall, "really struck home to me that this guy knew what the battle was all about."

Rumors had been flying for months that someone in the White House wanted Hickel out.

Hickel had no intention of being encouraged to resign by rumors leaking from White House aides.

Then came the call from the president, and as Hickel put it, "the president personally terminated me."

DRUG MERGER

Nixon Cast Shadow

WASHINGTON (WP) —The U.S. Justice Department's anti - trust chief said Wednesday that he tried to block a politically sensitive merger of two leading drug manufacturers but was overruled by deputy attorney general Richard G. Kleindienst.

The antitrust official, assistant attorney general Richard W. McLaren, discussed the merger of the Warner-Lambert Pharmaceutical Co. and Parke, Davis & Co. in an interview.

Not until Nov. 12, the eve of the consummation of the merger by the boards of directors of the two firms, did Kleindienst reject McLaren's plea that the department go to court to seek, first, a temporary restraining order and, second, a temporary injunction.

Kleindienst suggested that the case be sent over to the Federal Trade Commission, which originally had sought jurisdiction over the merger but had yielded to justice.

STUDY MOVE

Wednesday night, the FTC said only that it was "studying" the matter. Some antitrust sources believe that it soon will move in the U.S. court of appeals for a temporary order to maintain the companies as separate entities, so that in event of a possible divestiture effort they could be "unscrambled."

McLaren, speaking with "the benefit of hindsight," told a reporter that he probably had erred in failing earlier to transfer the case to the FTC.

His account of the entire episode underscores the political sensitivity of any justice department matter involving Warner-Lambert.

FRIEND OF NIXON

That firm's honorary chairman, Elmer H. Bobst, is a close friend of the president and his family — so close that Nixon refers to Bobst as his "honorary father."

In addition, Bobst was one of the half-dozen largest contributors to the Nixon-Agnew fund-raising committees in the 1968 presidential campaign.

Nixon and the attorney general, John N. Mitchell, were partners in the law firm that has represented Warner-Lambert and its predecessors for more than half a century. The firm is now known as Mudge, Rose, Guthrie and Alexander.

Ombudsman Studies Complaint

MONTREAL (CP) — Ombudsman Louis Marceau said Wednesday he received a written complaint Nov. 6 from Lise Rose, who told a coroner's inquest into the death of Pierre Laporte, Quebec's former labor minister, that she was beaten by police during interrogation.

While not elaborating on the complaint, Marceau said in an interview the gist of it was similar to statements made by the woman Tuesday.

Miss Rose, 25-year-old sister of two brothers wanted in the Laporte kidnapping, said she was stripped and beaten by police.

INHUMAN CONDITIONS

She also complained about "inhuman conditions" at provincial police headquarters, where she was held until Tuesday night, when she was transferred to a Montreal women's prison.

Also sent there was Lise Balcer, a girlfriend of Paul Rose, wanted with his brother Jacques in the Laporte kidnapping.

Lise Rose said Tuesday that both women were in the seventh day of a hunger strike to protest alleged discrimination against them.

Both Miss Rose and Clement Roy are to be sentenced next Tuesday for contempt for refusing to testify at the coroner's inquest.

Miss Rose's lawyer, Gaetan Robert, said Tuesday that complaining to the ombudsman about his client's treatment would take up too much time, perhaps several months.

Chief Inspector Paul Benoit of the QPP said Wednesday and investigation would be opened into the treatment of Miss Rose, although he did not believe "what she said at the inquest."

Torture of Cong Prisoners 'Deliberate Policy of U.S.'

By ROBERT C. MAYNARD
The Washington Post

Six U.S. military officers and enlisted men, some still on active duty, charged that the killing of civilians and the torture of prisoners in Vietnam is a "matter of deliberate policy."

For that reason, they said at a press conference in Washington, the court martial at Fort Benning, Ga., of Lt. William Calley, accused in the alleged massacre at My Lai, should be promptly halted.

One of them, Lt. Louis P. Font, a 1968 graduate of West Point, announced that he is now preparing to file charges against those he believes are the real culprits of Vietnam atrocities — the generals who design military policy.

"I learned at West Point that a commander is responsible for what happens under his command," Font said. "If Lt. Calley is guilty, then the people who are responsible for him are far more guilty."

Furthermore, Font and the other men who spoke argued, "My Lai was not an aberration. My Lai was part of deliberate, criminal policy."

To dramatize that contention the men announced the opening in Washington on Dec. 1 of three days of public hearings, at which they say some 75 veterans of the war in Vietnam will testify to innumerable violations of international military convention.

The hearings will be sponsored by the national committee for a citizens' commission of inquiry on U.S. war crimes in Vietnam. The committee is composed of Vietnam veterans who are organizing against the war.

Digests of the testimony of more than 60 prospective witnesses were handed out this week. Veterans of the war say in the digests that they witnessed the shooting of old men, children and other unarmed noncombatants. They say they watched as prisoners were tortured by having electric shocks applied to their bodies and by having their flesh torn by fine wire.

In many instances, the statements assert, senior officers were witnesses to acts that the men contend violate incidents occured, according warfare.

In August of 1968, for example, six months after My Lai, 24 women and children were massacred at Bong Son, according to William E. Marhoun of St. Paul, Minn., a former soldier who says he was there.

One of the reasons such incidents occurred, according to Robert Johnson, a former captain and a West Point graduate, is that many of the men are unaware of the "rules of land warfare" and because a process of dehumanization occurs in Vietnam in which Asian life is devalued.

"Generals, colonels — even captains — are promoted on the basis of their body counts," the number of the enemy reported killed in an operation, Johnson contended. He and others of the men asserted that many non-combatant civilians have died for the benefit of a unit's body count.

The men appearing at the press conference, included a former Marine corps lance corporal, T. Griffitts Ellison, whose father is a retired navy captain; three captains on active duty at Fort Meade, Robert Masters, Grier Merwin and Edward Fox, and Michael J. Ewell, an anti-war veterans organizer.

25 N. Viets Killed In Prison Camp Raid

WASHINGTON (WP) — The army-air force rescue team killed about 25 North Vietnamese during their assault against the Son Tay prison camp outside Hanoi, informed sources said Wednesday.

It was also learned that the American prisoners may have been gone from the camp for more than a month, nt just the "several weeks" estimated by Air Force Brig. Gen. Leroy J. Manor at the Pentagon briefing on Monday. He commanded the operation.

The North Vietnamese army, according to sources directly involved in the raid, apparently were using the compound's barracks for their own troops — not American prisoners.

How military intelligence leaders failed to detect the removal of Americans from Son Tay is still one of the biggest questions surrounding the commando-style raid.

'Names' Only Difference

The provincial government is selling a drug more dangerous than marijuana ... alcohol.

Why is it then, asked Thomas Bradley, administrator of Rest Haven Hospital, that a marijuana dealer is called a trafficker and the government's liquor stores vendors?

Bradley posed his question as keynote speaker for a two-day alcoholism conference which began Wednesday night in the First United Church Hall.

RIGID CONTROLS

The conference continues today. Bradley discussed the mental, moral and social aspects of alcoholism. He offered no definite solutions save for the suggestion of more rigid control on the sale of alcoholic beverages.

In spite of alcohol's known dangers, Bradley said, most requests for changes in liquor laws are for liberalization.

During the conference, eight workshops will deal with the alcoholic problems of young people, adults women and families.

They will examine the difficulties facing law enforcement agencies and employers and will discuss options for professional aid and mass media assistance.

The conference is sponsored by the Greater Victoria Alcoholism Association. Organizer Reg Clarkson said he hoped some sort of a master plan to deal with the region's alcohol problems would develop.

The Greater Value

FISHERIES MINISTER JACK Davis has again emerged as a strong champion for preservation of the natural environment of the Gulf of Georgia, particularly in protecting it from oil drilling operations. A report of the Science Council of Canada urges that an immediate start be made on a study of offshore drilling, thus reviving a controversy which flourished a year ago and involved a federal-provincial confrontation on jurisdiction. But Mr. Davis says that the issue was settled at that time — there will be no oil drilling in the Gulf of Georgia.

He reinforced his stand some months ago by proposing that much of the area around the Gulf Islands be declared a marine park, with protection of its underwater attractions against pollution from oil exploration, ships' discharges and other contamination.

It is difficult to understand the enthusiasm of the Science Council to rush the exploitation of every possible source of oil in Canada, even at the expense of local ecologies, when already there is difficulty in selling the available tapped supply. The Council's mention of a possible $1-billion expenditure on offshore oil exploration during the next decade takes no account of the possible counter-costs which might be assessed against this ostensible economic gain. Consideration of such offsetting factors does not constitute merely an "emotionally charged" reaction, as the Council suggests. It is a rational approach to saving a priceless asset which could not be reproduced for many times the money which might result from oil exploitation.

As Mr. Davis puts it: "What benefits could there conceivably be in finding oil in the Gulf where the geological structure is so minimal that no great pool of oil could be developed to change the economics of oil supply?" Against the handful of highly-skilled jobs oil development might provide, says Mr. Davis, we must consider "the jobs that might be lost or would not be developed in the fishery industry and the recreational industry which is ideal for that (Gulf) area."

The finality of the federal department's stand has been recognized by the oil interests, says Mr. Davis. These are now winding up their leases and permits and retiring from the picture. That picture is a part of the larger panorama of environmental protection which today is taking its rightful place in the public mind.

Quick cash returns from natural resources, ruining the locality from which the resources are taken, are uneconomic. The Gulf Island area has so much of value to offer in an increasingly industrialized and exploited world, that efforts to open it to development at the expense of fisheries and recreation should be fought. It is fortunate that Mr. Davis has so ably accepted that responsibility. He should be given every public support.

Are They Their Brother's Rescuer?

WITH INCREASING FREquency, competent boatmen enlisted by rescue co-ordination services, turn out, or redirect their courses, to help others in trouble in the seas around our coast. In the case of amateur and proficient boat operators, this is a form of insurance. They help others in distress, as a moral observance of the traditions of the sea, trusting that help will be forthcoming for themselves if they should need it.

For the most part they accept rescue responsibilities as part of their obligations as boatmen. There are, however, instances when private interests, involved in commercial boating, are drafted into service. In such cases they provide manpower and equipment and accept certain costs, and risks to themselves and their boats by responding to such calls. They frequently experience difficulty in collecting reimbursement for their expenses.

In their case, some method should be evolved to provide recompense for their performance. And amateur boatmen, who accept the same risks in a rescue attempt, may on occasion be in line for payment of costs they may incur.

With the boating population explosion showing no signs of diminishing, and with more inexperienced people venturing onto the water, it may be time for the government to interest itself in the issue. The traditions of the sea will continue and those able to give assistance to others in distress will continue to do so. At the same time some provision should be made to prevent this worthy tradition from inflicting serious costs on the individual who follows it.

A Split in the OAS

CANADA, WHICH LOOKS IN through the window at the Organization of American States but does not go through the door to join the gathering, will note the restrained flurry among members over Chile's resumption of full diplomatic ties with Cuba. The diplomatic move had been a predictable development for some time, having been virtually assured when Marxist Salvador Allende Gossens was elected president of Chile.

The significance of the Chilean move will be measured by its effects on other Latin American countries yet to separate themselves from the 1964 resolution by which the OAS broke off formal relations with Castro's country. In the opinion of some United States observers, Chile's decision could encourage a trend away from the six-year-old agreement which has separated Cuba from other Carribean nations.

In the opinion of President Allende, the OAS resolution is "unjust toward a sister nation that is struggling to shape its own destiny according to the sovereign will of its people." This attitude is countered by U.S. officials who say the Allende pronouncement overlooks Cuba's unfriendly stance as the base for exporting revolution to the Latin American mainland.

Chile's action, by itself, may not be a critical threat to the general unity shown by the OAS. It nevertheless could be the beginning, or the extension, of a split between the United States and her close hemispheric allies, and those Latin American nations which are not as susceptible to the United States' appeal.

Log-Rolling

New York Times

After two days of debate between protectionists and liberal traders, the House of Representatives has passed the trade restriction bill. The margin of victory was much narrower than seemed possible even two weeks ago. What it demonstrates is that, at minimum, there would be enough opposition to this bill in the House — and almost certainly in the Senate where it now goes — to sustain a presidential veto.

Mr. Nixon has thus far refused to commit himself to vetoing the Mills bill if it reaches him in its present form — or comes to him loaded with even more protectionist baubles when the Senate gets through with it. Unless the President does so, the United States may be precipitated into a trade war that will inflict serious wounds both on itself and on many of its closest trading partners and political allies.

The protectionist forces are strong only because they have clung together. Progress of the bill has been a triumph of log-rolling, but, even so, by relatively narrow margins.

The battle over the trade bill is not yet finished. There is a dedicated liberal trade force in the Senate that means to make a real fight of it. And there are many Senators who would join them, if the President would only put aside his uncertain trumpet and employ the prestige and power of his office in the national interest.

Participatory Democracy Poses Problems for Parliament

THE more the slowly accumulating results of the Liberal policy convention are studied the stronger seems to be the tendency among members of various parties, Liberals included, to question the theory and practice of "participatory democracy." There are at least two broad objections. One is that participatory democracy appears to be posing problems, perhaps not generally foreseen, for parliamentary democracy. We may admire Athens but we cannot go back to Athens. The alternative, if the citizen is to be involved in "decision making," seems to be an approach to government by Gallup Poll. But where will this leave the member of Parliament? It is already a very common complaint that the role of a member steadily diminishes as the power of the executive expands.

Western

It is interesting in this context that the convention endorsed by a very large majority the proposition that a member of Parliament wishing to change parties should be required to resign his seat and contest a by-election. Whether it was generally realized or not, this would require an amendment to the constitution. It is plainly an attack, although it was probably not so regarded, on the independence of a member who is responsible at present not to any group but to his electors generally. What he owes to them, as Burke pointed out, is his judgment. It was in exercise of his best judgment that the late Winston Churchill crossed from the Liberals to the Tories, no one challenging his right.

Of the many comparable cases in our Parliament, that of Bud Olson is perhaps most interesting because he is a prominent minister of the Trudeau government. No by-election was required when he left Social Credit. The Liberals saw no impropriety in the course he followed; nor apparently did his Medicine Hat constituents who reasserted their confidence in him at the general election.

Weigh the Consequences

There may be arguments that the parliamentary system is obsolete and should be replaced by some different system. But in that case it would seem wise, first, to evaluate the system we have with its merits and demerits; then to consider alternatives. Otherwise we may slide into change without realizing what we are doing or where we are going.

Secondly Liberal and Conservative experience thus far suggests that participatory democracy tends to produce participatory confusion. There was much to admire in the Liberal convention. It was serious, earnest, on fire with ideas. It was probably a great success from the standpoint of party morale. But the product is bewildering, as it was almost bound to be when the delegates found themselves confronted with such a Niagara of resolutions.

How, for example, is it possible to reconcile these two environmental resolutions? One reads: A Canadian national parks policy should give priority to the preservation of wilderness areas over the development of recreational land. According to the other, which immediately followed on the ballot paper: A Canadian national parks policy should give priority to the development of recreational land over the conservation and study of natural resources. Presumably, these were intended as alternatives but the convention approved both.

A possible explanation of some of the difficulties is that a sort of compensatory principle was at work. When so much was under debate, it was impossible for delegates to focus on all the resolutions. Frequently they voted against extreme positions because these provoked at least limited discussion. Having done so, propositions which seemed relatively more reasonable were accepted, though serious analysis would have revealed the very defects to which they had earlier objected.

Thus the parks resolutions are perhaps explicable on the theory that a distinction was being drawn between wilderness and other resources. In the case of marijuana, delegates voted down the proposition that possession should no longer be an offence. But they then asserted (was this intended as second best?) that it should be controlled in the same manner as alcohol.

Economic Conflicts

On the major issue of economic nationalism western delegates, emphasizing the importance of foreign investment, won a clear victory on the most important resolutions. But again the sheer volume of resolutions produced all sorts of contradictory verdicts. Thus majority control of our industries is to be an objective of industrial policy; large new foreign investments are to be closely scrutinized by a review board — permitted only if in the national interest, whatever that may mean. There is to be a buyer of last resort, subject to the same qualification. Then on the ballot on international relations, delegates affirmed:

"Canada's foreign policy is determined, to a very large extent, by the American domination of the Canadian economy. To be independent in world affairs, we must first repatriate more control of our economy."

The odd fact is that we have been lately asserting our independence in all sorts of ways; through recognition of China, through voting for China's admission to the United Nations, through unilateral establishment of the Arctic sanitary zone and, most recently, by the stern admonitions on pollution addressed by Joe Greene and Jack Davis to the United States.

Nuclear Confusion

Not all the results on the foreign affairs resolutions are yet available. But those on de-nuclearization are difficult to reconcile with the existing Norad partnership. It is somewhat ironic that the Liberals came to power by an abrupt policy shift which made them the champions of nuclear war-heads for Bomarc missiles.

In less sophisticated times, policy was often developed by committees specially appointed for the task. It is now apparently the view that this was undemocratic; that as many persons as possible should be involved in policy-making. But the older systems had at least this advantage; they usually produced fairly coherent policy statements and thus helped the voter to make clear-minded decisions. Up to now participatory democracy has contributed mainly to fuzziness. At best there will be a limit to the number who can participate. But every qualified voter has the right of choice. If the price of greater participation is a blurring of issues which effectively restricts the opportunity of choice, is there an overall gain?

Correspondence From Our Readers

Bad Taste and Ignorance

Your article headed "Poor humbly ask Queen to stay home" was certainly badly phrased. Far from being humble the letter was presumptuous and a blatant display of bad taste and ignorance. The Queen has accepted our invitation and cannot now renege. No doubt she has many more things she would prefer to do but she does have a duty. Mr. Olszewski, do you understand the word?

Our economic situation has more than one cause. Partly it is a world wide situation but aggravated in this province by a labor force that is short-sighted and greedy to a point where we are pricing ourselves out of markets. And this province will not be in a more favorable financial position until the workers realize that to get an income you have to give something to your employers in return.

I hope the Queen does not see the letter. It does not "dramatize the plight of the poor." It shows its author's lack of knowledge both of proper conduct and the right place to take his grievance.— M. Dorothy Bessex, 5360 Lochside.

What Goes Into . . .

Are there any standards set by law to control the percentage of ingredients in bologna? If not, the producers should be compelled to show on the package or wrapper a list of ingredients including percentages of each ingredient. It should also be stated from what kind of animal the meat content was obtained, and what parts of the animal were used. Supermarkets should not be permitted to avoid those requirements by cutting up large bolognas into one or two pound pieces, and re-wrapping them without a similar certificate. At present the only information on the super market label is the weight and price, both plainly shown.

I think the public is being bamboozled by the sale of a very inferior product that would be expensive at any price, considering its lack of nutrient value.

And while we are on the subject, why not take a look at the sausage vendor? The consumer is in the dark when he buys sausage also. While it is true that they have a more pleasing taste, it is also true that they cost up to several times the price of bologna, and no one knows exactly what he is eating.

I say let those products be fully and honestly branded, and then rigidly inspected for possible violations. — Don Alduc, 605 Dallas.

Magnet of Kindness

I would like to commend Mayor Haddock, Mr. Bates, Mr. Johnson and all the Parks Board for their kindness and care of "Queenie", the old horse who died recently in Beacon Hill Park.

It is very comforting to know there are so many kind people in the world, and we are extremely grateful. — Mrs. Sybil Blyth, 460 Chester.

Critic's Approach

The recent bit of ultra-negativism, as expressed by your acerbic critic, Audrey Johnson, has finally angered me enough to direct my comments to your paper! I refer to Mrs. Johnson's critique of Bastion Theatre's latest production of Blithe Spirit. I was in the audience at the same time as Mrs. Johnson, and am wondering, as I so often do, after reading her critiques, if she is even referring to the same play!

Surely there must have been some redeeming features she could have pointed out to the readers . . . readers who so often, and so erroneously, go to see a play only after it has been given the "seal of approval" by a critic, who is, after all, only human as you or I!

I am not involved in theatre in any way, except that I enjoy seeing plays, and listening to music, even when performed by local talent, or people who are not so-called professionals. While Blithe Spirit would not be classed among my favourite plays, I certainly enjoyed it, as I do enjoy so many of the local productions put on by these obviously dedicated people.

Why then, oh why, must we ALWAYS have negative opinions expressed in print by people who must obviously be doing more harm to the theatre in Victoria than good? Why not, first of all, decide what the audience liked or disliked? By my own way of thinking, audience reaction for Blithe Spirit was one of delight and enjoyment. Perhaps Mrs. Johnson feels local productions don't come up to par with theatre in New York or London, but I have seen plays in London certainly of not better quality reviewed with much more kindness than Mrs. Johnson ever displays towards local productions.

Her destructive criticism about such things as costumes vs. set design don't make one whit of difference over the entire period of the play, if on the whole, the audience enjoyed it . . . as they obviously did at the opening night of Blithe Spirit. Most people are not aware of the thousands of dollars it takes to produce a show of this calibre . . . money that is certainly not going to be forthcoming if we don't provide just a little more incentive from our critics, who do, after all, prevent people from seeing a play they might well enjoy if they hadn't been "turned off" by sour criticisms. Surely there are good points in everything. Let's hear a little more of the pats . . . there are lots of them to be found . . . even in Victoria! How about it Mrs. Johnson? — Miss Monika Forberger, 32 Bushby Street.

(Editor's note: As a professional critic, Mrs. Johnson looks for good and bad points in a stage production and points them out in the hope that this may contribute to better theatre here. A play may provide a pleasurable evening yet still have flaws which should be discussed. Superficial praise is the easy way out but does little to help actors.)

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times of November 26, 1910.

Viscount Hill says the future of Canada is assured. We should have thought it would not have been necessary to visit this country to make a wise remark such as that, considering that the best Canadian securities sell at practically the same price as consols and that the shrewdest of British investors are sending their money here. It is plain that the future of Canada was assured long before the viscount came here. At the same time it was very nice of the British nobleman to be polite about it.

'Canada Perfect Example of the New Imperialism'

By DONALD CREIGHTON

(Historian Creighton recently spoke to the Canadian and Empire Clubs in Toronto on "The Coming Defeat of Canadian Nationalism," which he said is "approaching, but not yet quite inevitable . . ." This article is excerpted from the speech.)

Our generation, and the one which preceded it, were brought up to believe that the hope of the world lay in peaceful internationalism.

Now, after a trial of a quarter-century, it has become manifest that the Twentieth Century's second attempt to found a world order has failed almost as completely as the first.

It is not nationalism, but imperialism, political and economic, which carries the greatest peril to humanity.

And, in the absence of a genuine and effective world order, the only power strong enough to prevent the destructive onward march of imperialism is the national state.

Canada is an almost perfect illustration of the workings of the new imperialism. It is well on the way to becoming a political, economic and cultural colony of the greatest of these modern empires, the United States.

Its fate may be a portent for the future of the world. If it roused itself and took the lead in a movement of national self-assertion by the smaller states, it could not only break the monolithic front which North America presents to the world, but it might help inspire other dependent nations to recover their independence from other imperial masters.

It is a great role, upon which the fate of humanity may well hang; but the tragic fact is that Canada may not be strong enough to play it. Canadian nationalism is weak and it can and may be defeated. It is vulnerable because it is subjected to enormous external pressures and because it is not integral but divided.

The events of the past decade in Quebec have revealed the strength of the persistent French-Canadian urge toward separation; and during the same period the United States has steadily extended its external influence or control on every aspect of our national life.

In the past year, these symptoms of national weakness became so alarmingly obvious that an earnest public debate began over that most fundamental of all possible Canadian questions—the prospects for Canada's survival as an independent nation.

Events Brought Debate to Climax

Two events, occurring in fairly rapid succession this autumn, brought this debate to its present anxious climax. The first was the announcement of the sale of 6.3 trillion cubic feet of natural gas to the United States; and the second was an outbreak of savage violence—kidnapping and murder—by the Front de Liberation Quebecois.

The sale of natural gas quickly emerged as one of the key issues in the debate. Its very magnitude—it will commit a third of our established reserves to U.S. use—is disturbing in itself; but this is not the only reason for the disquietude of Canadians.

They cannot help suspecting that this is not a solitary transaction, but that it will speedily be followed by others, and that these will be concerned, not only with natural gas, but also with oil, electric power, nuclear energy and water.

It is plain now that the voracious requirements of the U.S. economic, military and industrial machine and the insatiable demands of an extravagant and wasteful U.S. society have simply outstripped what the most richly endowed half-continent in the world can provide.

The evident aim of the U.S. economic and military establishment is to induce the Canadian government and people to acknowledge that Canada's natural resources are, in fact, continental resources, freely available to Americans on exactly the same terms as their own domestic supplies.

We have become accustomed, through constant repetition, to the sale of our industries to U.S. corporations; but oil and gas, water and water power are not ordinary assets—things that Canadians have built or acquired themselves. They are part of the original endowment of nature, of the birthright of Canada.

The possibility that Canada will assume the role of Esau and sell its birthright for a little "red pottage"—gold, that is—is the first of the two great shocks which Canadians sustained this autumn.

The second was their realization of the horrifying lengths to which the French-Canadian separatists were prepared to go in their struggle for the liberation of Quebec.

Of course, their deeds are the work of a very small minority; but does not its very existence imply a much more widespread dissatisfaction with Confederation and a correspondingly deep division in the Canadian people?

In the light of these revelations, what hope is there for Canadian nationalism?

The first thing we must do is to realize the strength of the forces that threaten our survival. North American continentalism actively encouraged by Canadian governments for two generations, has now become almost irresistible.

A Huge Equity In Our Development

The exploitation of Canada, during the past 50 years, has been largely a continental, not a national achievement. The long association of Canadians with the people of the United States, their dependence upon U.S. capital, their reliance upon U.S. initiative and technology and their gradual acceptance of U.S. standards and values have given the Republic a huge equity in the development of the Canadian nation.

The United States has had a profound influence on all aspects of our recent economic growth; it has affected our foreign and defense policies, and even, at certain deplorable moments, our domestic politics; it has permeated our newspapers, our periodicals and, as the proposed sale of the Ryerson Press suggests, our publishing houses; and in radio and television it is dominant.

This process of osmosis has been going on for a long time; and, in the end, it has substantially altered the Canadian character, the Canadian outlook on life.

The division of North America in two nations is not an accident; Canda has a meaning, though Canadians have gone far towards forgetting it.

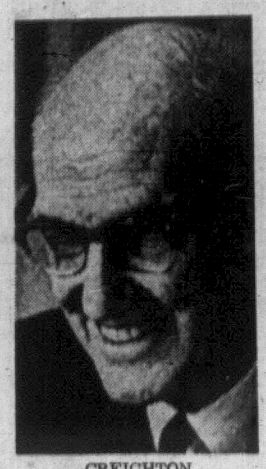

From the beginning, we differed from our neighbors to the south; and our federal union of 1867 was a consciously native product, designed to express our own convictions and values, and deliberately independent of U.S. models.

The stated purposes of the Canadian Constitution were not "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," as the American Declaration of Independence put it, but "peace, order, and good government;" and these understated aims fairly accurately express the character and convictions of our fathers and grandfathers.

They believed in private restraint and public order; they never glorified individual freedom, initiative and enterprise in quite the unqualified U.S. fashion.

In their eyes, the public good meant more than the sum total of the private satisfactions of the individuals composing society; and they never denied the necessity of state action, even on a grand scale, for public welfare, or national development, or national security.

These characteristic Canadian qualities and beliefs still exist, of course. They help to preserve Canada as a peaceful home for its own citizens, as a haven for political refugees and, despite what has happened in Quebec, a sanctuary for fugitives from racial conflict, mob violence, and organized crime.

CREIGHTON

This relative simplicity and tranquillity still characterize our lives, still exist, but ever since the Second World War, they have become increasingly qualified, as Canadian society grows more urbanized and more dependent on the marvels of technology.

We are afflicted with a bad case of that most virulent of all modern diseases, "growth mania" and its most prominent symptom, quantification. For us, economic indices have taken the place of divine revelation.

The most important things in our national life are the percentage increase in economic growth, the balance of payments, the rate of foreign exchange and the rise or fall of the Dow-Jones averages.

"Growth mania" has come to govern all our economic relations with the United States; growth mania identifies us ever more closely with the Americans. In other words, we have met the enemy, and it is ourselves.

Why should we not sell our natural resources, for good prices, to the Americans, in exactly the same easy way as we sell all our other assets?

It is true that the complacent old belief in the inexhaustibility of the natural riches of North America has been proven false — false at least so far as the United States is concerned; but the Canadian government and the Canadian petroleum industry have been earnestly trying to assure us that our supplies of natural gas are ample for the next few decades, or even for the next half-century, which is as far as they ever seem to think it necessary to look into the future, though 50 years is hardly more than two-thirds a normal lifetime.

Besides, even if our estimates should prove over-optimistic, and our natural resources run out, won't technology come to the rescue with new sources of industrial power and domestic comfort?

Why not make a quick buck out of selling our natural resources now, when, in 20 years' time, we shall probably be getting our energy from nuclear power or solar heat?

Why, as Mr. Trudeau observed, should we lock ourselves up in the old-fashioned gas-and-petroleum age, when, in a decade or so, in some unknown but miraculous fashion, technology will have conjured up an earthly paradise out of practically nothing and we shall have ceased to mine the poor old earth?

Intimidation By Percentages

Above all, let us never run the risk of missing the latest technological marvel, through the mistaken course of restricting the entrance of U.S. capital and regaining control of our industries.

If we ever did that, Mr. Maréhand assures us, our standard of living would fall 50 per cent. Of course, Mr. Marchand hasn't any clear idea of what would really happen. What he does know is that a good big percentage is the one thing that will terrify us.

U.S. continentalism has not only taken over most of our assets and threatens to appropriate what is left of our birthright; it has also created a distinct philosophy of life, a philosophy of technology and empire, which might be called the established religion of the United States. And that religion has taken over our minds.

Chile Challenges OAS Cuban Boycott

LE MONDE
An Editorial

The first foreign policy decision of the Popular Unity government that came to power in Chile on November 4 was to resume full diplomatic relations with Cuba.

It was the decision everyone was waiting for in this area. It was also the easiest and the most natural.

There are strong personal ties between Salvador Allende Gossens, the new Chilean president, and Fidel Castro.

As Mr. Allende put it, the reopening of relations between Santiago and Havana helps "put an end to a situation that is unjust to a fraternal country struggling to forge its own future in accord with the sovereign will of its people."

He added that the move was "reasonable, both morally and legally" and that it was not inconsistent with other "international treaties, which the government is determined to respect."

There is therefore no question of the new Chilean leaders' espousing "armed struggle" still occasionally defended by the Cuban revolution's spokesmen.

The Socialist Allende, a partisan of legality and an enemy of violence, has always maintained that it was possible to take power through the ballot box.

His electoral victory on September 4 allows him to present recognition of Cuba as a gesture of friendship and not an endorsement of a brand of revolutionary violence that, in any case, the Cubans have toned down appreciably in the last two years.

The Santiago government can also point out that its decision is a simple extension of the policy of the preceding government, led by former President Eduardo Frei Montalva.

The break between Cuba and Chile came in August 1964 when conservative Jorge Alessandri Rodriguez was president.

Even then Chile's delegation did not approve the decision taken by the Organization of American States (OAS), under considerable pressure from Washington, to exclude Cuba from the inter-American family of nations.

As early as 1967, the Christian Democrats in power in Santiago, showed some desire to bring Cuba out of quarantine.

Foreign Minister Gabriel Valdes, and later President Frei denounced this ostracism of a Latin American country, and normal trade relations between Chile and Cuba were in fact resumed well before the Popular Unity coalition's recent victory.

So, if the United States or the OAS were to impose sanctions against Chile for having completely normalized relations with Cuba, Mr. Allende would have good reason for surprise.

There is, too, the case of Mexico, which ignored the OAS decision and was for several years the only Latin American country represented in Havana. The United States has drawn some advantages from the situation and has never held it against its southern neighbor.

It is nonetheless true that Chile's action is the first real political challenge to the OAS, however discredited and ineffectual that regional organization may be.

And it is equally true that other Latin American nations may be tempted to follow Chile's lead and further break down the diplomatic wall around Cuba.

Indeed, the Havana regime's ostracism seems illogical at a time when Soviet presence in Latin America is on the increase.

Rather than worrying, the United States ought to be reassured to the extent that Moscow now firmly condemns the violent revolutionary movements in Latin America.

The Therapy That Nobody Understands

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

Fourth of Series

ESSONDALE — The ward is the size of a large classroom. Pale lavender walls. Huge windows. A dozen beds. In a corner by the door to the washroom an oxygen tank has been set up. A tray of syringes. Curtains on metal frames have been rolled into place.

Heavy duty extension wire uncoils from a socket halfway around the room, winding under the curtains, connecting to a small black box. Filaments dangle from the box, attached to a transparent green plastic head-set, as fragile-looking as dragonfly wings.

The box has gauges showing voltage (up to 190) and time in fractions of seconds. It is a model B-24, EKG Sol, what ever that means.

Beside the box, a small jar of white jelly to be smeared on the patient's temples before the head-set is fixed in place.

One by one the patients are trolleyed in.

Two nurses take up positions. A burly anesthetist sticks a needle in the patient's arm. A muscle relaxant, so he won't suffer any fractures during the convulsions to come.

Then a rubbery device is fixed in his mouth, so that he won't choke to death.

The doctor, a young woman, red-haired, very business-like, waits several seconds for the relaxant to take effect, dabs the jelly on the temples.

Lightly she fixes the head-set in place.

With the nurses and the anesthetist now gripping his arms and legs, the man's eyes roll wildly for a few seconds. His forehead turns glassy with sweat. His toes curl and uncurl. He writhes. Then his eyelids slide down . . .

No sound.

But the needle on the gauge leaps to between 130 and 140 volts. For about half a second.

Electricity surges into his head. All the normal bio-electrical energy flickering through the brain abruptly, cataclysmically, is forced to DISCHARGE. A flood of messages go screaming down through the body, alarms clanging, all the nerve cells being screamed at: CONTRACT! CONTRACT!

He snaps into an arched, frozen position, flesh on his face surging upward as his teeth crunch like a trap into the rubber thing in his mouth.

Then he begins to convulse.

At first a ripple that goes right through him. Then a shudder. A sloughing wave of muscle tissue, every tendon, every cord trying to rise up and tear itself out of the electrified chaos of his nerves. The movement becomes rhythmic. Piston-like. He turns into a giant hammer pounding furiously against nothing . . .

Ram! Ram! Ram!

It goes on for almost a minute.

Then the spasms ease. His body begins to uncoil. The head-set and the rubber mouthpiece are removed. He's wheeled to another part of the room.

This is ECT.

Electro Convulsion Therapy. Nobody knows exactly how it works or what it does. But it makes acutely depressed people less depressed. Three times a week at Riverview, roughly a dozen people go through this.

Not all of them co-operate.

The red-haired doctor is explaining to me how the little black box works when I hear an odd noise. Farr-off. Can't make out what it is.

But the doctor knows right away.

"This next patient is going to be a bit difficult," she says.

I takes eight nurses and attendants to get the old man into the room. He is pale, stubbly-chinned, rheumy-eyed. Thin arms. Yet at this moment he has the strength to fight them all.

"No! No! No! I CAN'T! LEAVE ME ALONE! I CAN'T! I CAN'T! NO! MY HEART! MY HEART!

Two of the male attendants are giggling.

He thrashes frantically, possessed, his screams and cries pushing his voice beyond cracking point, and by the time they have him pinned down, all eight of them, on the table, and get the needle into his arm, all he can do is make a hacking, croaking "AH, AH, AH, AH . . ."

Forty-three times he makes that noise after the needle goes in.

Then the head-set.

But no convulsions. And so another blast from the little black box. And finally, feebly, weakly, he convulses.

And is wheeled away.

CANADA'S TAINTED VOTE

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

It is dispiriting that Canada, having resolved upon an important international initiative — the recognition of the People's Republic of China and support for the admission of that country to the United Nations — should taint the decision with hyprocisy.

Canadian ambassador to the United Nations Yvon Beaulne, speaking in the annual UN Assembly debate on China, conceded that "one of the most important developments in Canadian external relations in recent years has been our agreement with the People's Republic of China on mutual recognition and the establishment of diplomatic relations, effective October 13." Presumably he meant that action to speak louder than the words he did not speak, and to recommend to other nations that they follow Canada's example.

He went on, "The Canadian government believes that the the government of the People's Republic of China should occupy the seat of China in the UN. We look forward especially to the day when the People's Republic will be seated in this assembly and the Security Council." Canada, he said, would this year support the Albanian resolution calling for the admission of the Communist Chinese and the expulsion of the Nationalists.

Quite right. It is nonsense that the government which represents 700,000,000 Chinese, one-quarter of the world's population, should be excluded from the United Nations.

But does Canada, having set its foot upon the road of reason, then pursue it to the end? It does not. Canada, explains Mr. Beaulne — speaking, of course, for the cabinet — while supporting the admission of China will, at the same time, still agree with the United States that the question is an important one, requiring a two-thirds majority to pass.

Canada, thus, helps to frustrate the admission of China to the United Nations, saying piously through Mr. Beaulne that it will go the whole way when it becomes apparent that admission is the wish of a "significant proportion of the membership." Not, that is, a simple majority.

One might understand the position if the question had burst suddenly upon the United Nations, if there had not been time for considered thought upon the subject, if a hiatus were necessary for the member nations to consult their own views and those of their allies, if action were fraught with the dangers that can attend haste.

But this is an old, old question, one in which the position-taking has become almost as stylized as a ballet. Far too much time has already gone into hashing it over, particularly when it is recognized that a UN vote to admit China would be but the first step of many that would have to be taken before the actual seating of China.

To use the two-thirds majority on this issue is to pervert the measure. For Canada to agree to its use, as Canada has done, is to display weakness. Will we never go abroad without packing a forked tongue?

Computer Trading Studied

TORONTO (CP) — A governor of the Toronto Stock Exchange hinted Wednesday that the exchange may be moving toward computer-assisted trading which would virtually eliminate the trading floor as it now exists.

J. Christopher Barron told the Electric Club that further examination is being given the idea after a preliminary study by Bell Canada.

Barron said trading by computer would "in effect remove the need for a trading floor located within a building."

"It may also have major consequences for the exchange's present basis for admitting members. Perhaps eventually the requirements for membership will be changed substantially and other types of financial institutions will be able to plug into the system.

"The exchange might become a computer communications utility."

Barron said communication is a vital part of the brokerage business and now absorbs about 34 per cent of the non-labor costs incurred by exchange members.

"It is essential, from a survival point of view, to consider the computer-communication area as a total system," he said.

Copper Giant

Consultants for Copper Giant Mining Corp. Ltd. recommend a $300,000 expansion of exploration including drilling on the 40-claim Wiek silver property at the confluence of Fraser and Chilcotin rivers.

Diamond drilling has shown values in high-grade and an induced polarization survey was to be followed by magnetometer survey, soil sampling and geological mapping.

Reco Silver

A 68-claim holding in the Slocan has shown results from a program of drifting and reopening old adits and portals, reports Reco Silver Mines Ltd.

Priority is being given to opening a low level crossout at a cost estimated at $30,000, along with other underground development and rehabilitation.

Mill site and buildings and additional surface rights also have been obtained by Reco at Cody, a former mining centre in the Slocan.

Stannex

Stannex Minerals Ltd. says according to a consultant it can design and build a mill suitable to handle 400 tons of ore daily from its Revelstoke silver-lead property.

There are four veins under exploration and development, only one of which has been exposed on all levels, the company said.

There are 16 other veins on the property, now subject to a feasibility study.

Versafood

A 10-year loan at 8 per cent will provide Versafood Services Ltd. with $3.5 million, according to an agreement with a principal shareholder, ARA Services Inc.

The senior, unsecured note would be interest-bearing only for six years and for four years would be convertible into Versafood class A shares at $7, for the next three at $8 and the final three years at $10. Versafood would be entitled to redeem the note without penalty after 30 months.

The directors and regulatory authorities must approve of the transaction.

Agra

Agra Industries Ltd. earnings for the year ended July 31 totalled $525,377 compared with $140,797 in the same period a year ago, based on income nearly three times greater.

The Saskatoon-based diversified industrial company reported $14.38 million in revenue against $4.88 million last year, up 194 per cent, due primarily to acquisition of the Western Caissons group of companies and formation of an engineering division.

Per share earnings, based on 1.44 million shares outstanding, amounted to 36.2 cents, vs. 11.5 cents last year, when there were 1.22 million shares. Some shares were issued for cash, others for pooling of interest in acquired companies.

Hayes Pacific

New premises of Hayes Pacific Sales Ltd. at Nanaimo Industrial Park will be opened by Mayor Frank Ney at 2 p.m. Dec. 5.

They replace Hayes former heavy equipment depot at Cassidy and will include full new equipment, parts and service facilities with a staff of parts men, mechanics and salesmen.

Kaiser Sets $10 Million Program at Plant in B.C.

Kaiser Resources Ltd. has undertaken a $10 million modification and improvement program for its coal preparation plant near Sparwood, British Columbia, it was announced Wed. by Jack J. Carlson, president. "This program will not only overcome present preparation plant limitations, but will also increase the plant's operating availability and help reduce costs," he said.

The changes and additions reflect engineering studies by Kaiser's Canadian engineers, as well as consultation with the Japanese steel industry concerning the basic design of the plant. Construction of the new facilities will be under the direction of Kaiser Engineers with completion scheduled in approximately 12 to 14 months. Many individual units, however, will be put into operation at different periods throughout 1971 resulting in various stages of production improvements.

Major features of the program include improved drying capability, another thickener to increase the effectiveness of the fine coal cleaning process, and modification of existing circuits and installation of additional circuits in the plant. These changes and additions will result in a lower ash content of the coal, increased production and improved overall operating efficiencies.

In keeping with company policy, the purchase of new machinery and equipment, and the fabrication of new structures, will be made in Canada to the maximum extent possible. All new designs for the preparation plant were made with continued emphasis on environment control features.

GNP Displays Modest Climb

OTTAWA (CP) — Preliminary figures released this week show a modest increase in economic modest increase in economic activity in the July-September period, with a decrease in the rate of inflation.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported the gross national product — the total value of all goods and services produced in the economy in a year — increased by $1 billion in the third quarter to $84.1 billion.

The increase represents a 1.3-per-cent climb in GNP from the second quarter. But this was still below the average quarterly increase of 2.2 per cent experienced over the last several years.

Famous Players Will Reorganize

TORONTO (CP) — Famous Players Canadian Corp. Ltd. has announced plans to separate its cable television and theatre operations.

The planned reorganization would result in virtual 100-per-cent Canadian ownership of communications assets, in compliance with federal legislation.

At present, Paramount International Films Inc. and its parent firm, Gulf and Western Industries Inc., of New York, hold 51.15 per cent of Famous Players issued shares.

U.S. Considers Ban On Anti-Freeze Sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission said Wednesday it is considering banning du Pont's Zerex antifreeze from the market for alleged adverse effects on automobile cooling systems.

The possibility of an unprecedented outright ban on sales of the anti-leak antifreeze was raised in an order accompanying a proposed complaint that accuses du Pont and its advertising agency of false advertising.

Du Pont called the FTC complaint totally unjustified. It said the commission made no complaint when the company submitted both technical data and the finished commercial for approval.

COOLING SYSTEM

As for claims that Zerex damages cooling systems, the company said that although Zerex is sold with an unconditional consumer guarantee complaints have amounted to only one-one hundredth of a per cent of sales. It added that complaints "characteristically have been caused by dirty and corroded cooling systems, not by Zerex."

In another action announced Tuesday, the commission approved complaints challenging advertising by two large toy manufacturers, Mattel, Inc., of Hawthorne, Calif., and Topper Corp. of Elizabeth, N.J.

Claims made by both firms about racing cars and track sets and by Mattel about a doll are deceptive and prey on the vulnerability of children, the FTC said.

LEAK STOPS

The FTC took particular exception to the can-stabbing television commercial for du Pont's Zerex anti-leak antifreeze. The commercial shows a can of antifreeze being punctured with an instrument. At first a steady stream flows through the hole but the leak stops within seconds.

A voice tells the viewer that Zerex "stops most common radiator leaks . . . just like that."

The complaint alleges that the demonstration is "false, misleading and deceptive because it is not, as represented, evidence which actually proves that Zerex will stop leaks which actually occur in automotive cooling systems under normal operating conditions."

In addition, the FTC said, du Pont has not told the public that Zerex may damage radiator coils, thermostats and pressure caps through the buildup of deposits.

In its complaints against the toy companies, the FTC specifically challenges advertising of Mattel's Hot Wheels racing car and track sets and its Dancerina Doll. The complaint against Topper cites the firm's Johnny Lightning racing car and track sets.

The complaints say television commercials and packaging designs for both cars and track sets misrepresent the appearance or performance of the toys, falsely represent how they are used and carry meaningless endorsements by well-known racing-car drivers.

TORIES TRY BLOCK OF AUDITOR'S BILL

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservatives tried Wednesday to force withdrawal of a government bill that would limit the authority of Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson, with no success.

Gerald Baldwin (PC—Peace River) said the bill represents an attempt by the government to harass and inhibit Henderson.

Baldwin referred particularly to the effect on the auditor-general's scrutiny of a destroyer construction program.

However, he was unsuccessful in getting the unanimous consent needed to get the motion on the floor.

Florida Freezing

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A November cold wave drove temperatures below freezing over much of Florida Wednesday, striking hard at winter vegetables and flowers but apparently doing little damage to the biggest orange and grapefruit crop in the state's history.

Most frigid spot in the state was the capital city of Tallahassee, where the temperature plunged to 13 and a transient was found dead, apparently from cold exposure.

A Song From Benson?

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield says Finance Minister Edgar Benson should "be required to sing or get away from the piano."

Benson is expected to sing a Santa Claus tune for Canadian taxpayers next week or soon after.

Informants said Wednesday the government will announce soon, probably this week, its decision whether to present a late fall budget or a less lengthy statement on means to stimulate the economy and employment.

The budget or statement will be presented in the Commons next week or early in the following week and, sources indicate, it will include tax cuts.

The form of any such tax cuts is secret. Works Minister Arthur Laing told the Commons Nov. 13 when he was acting prime minister that the government's measures "will have the effect of stimulating employment in the field which is the total responsibility of the government and encouraging it in the private sector."

Figure Denied

CANBERRA (AP — South African Ambassador Johannes Uys has denied that 257,000 Africans had been jailed without trial for political offences.

Election Draws 105 Candidates

VANCOUVER (CP) — A record number of 105 candidates, including 12 for mayor, have filed nomination papers for Vancouver's Dec. 9 civic election.

Deadline for nominations was noon Wednesday.

In addition to the mayor's job, there are 10 openings on city council, nine on school board and seven on park board.

The mayoralty candidates are:

ID System Denied

TORONTO (CP) — The general manager of Polaroid Corp. of Canada Wednesday denied newspaper reports from Washington that his firm is negotiating with the Quebec government to provide machines for an identification system for all Quebec residents.

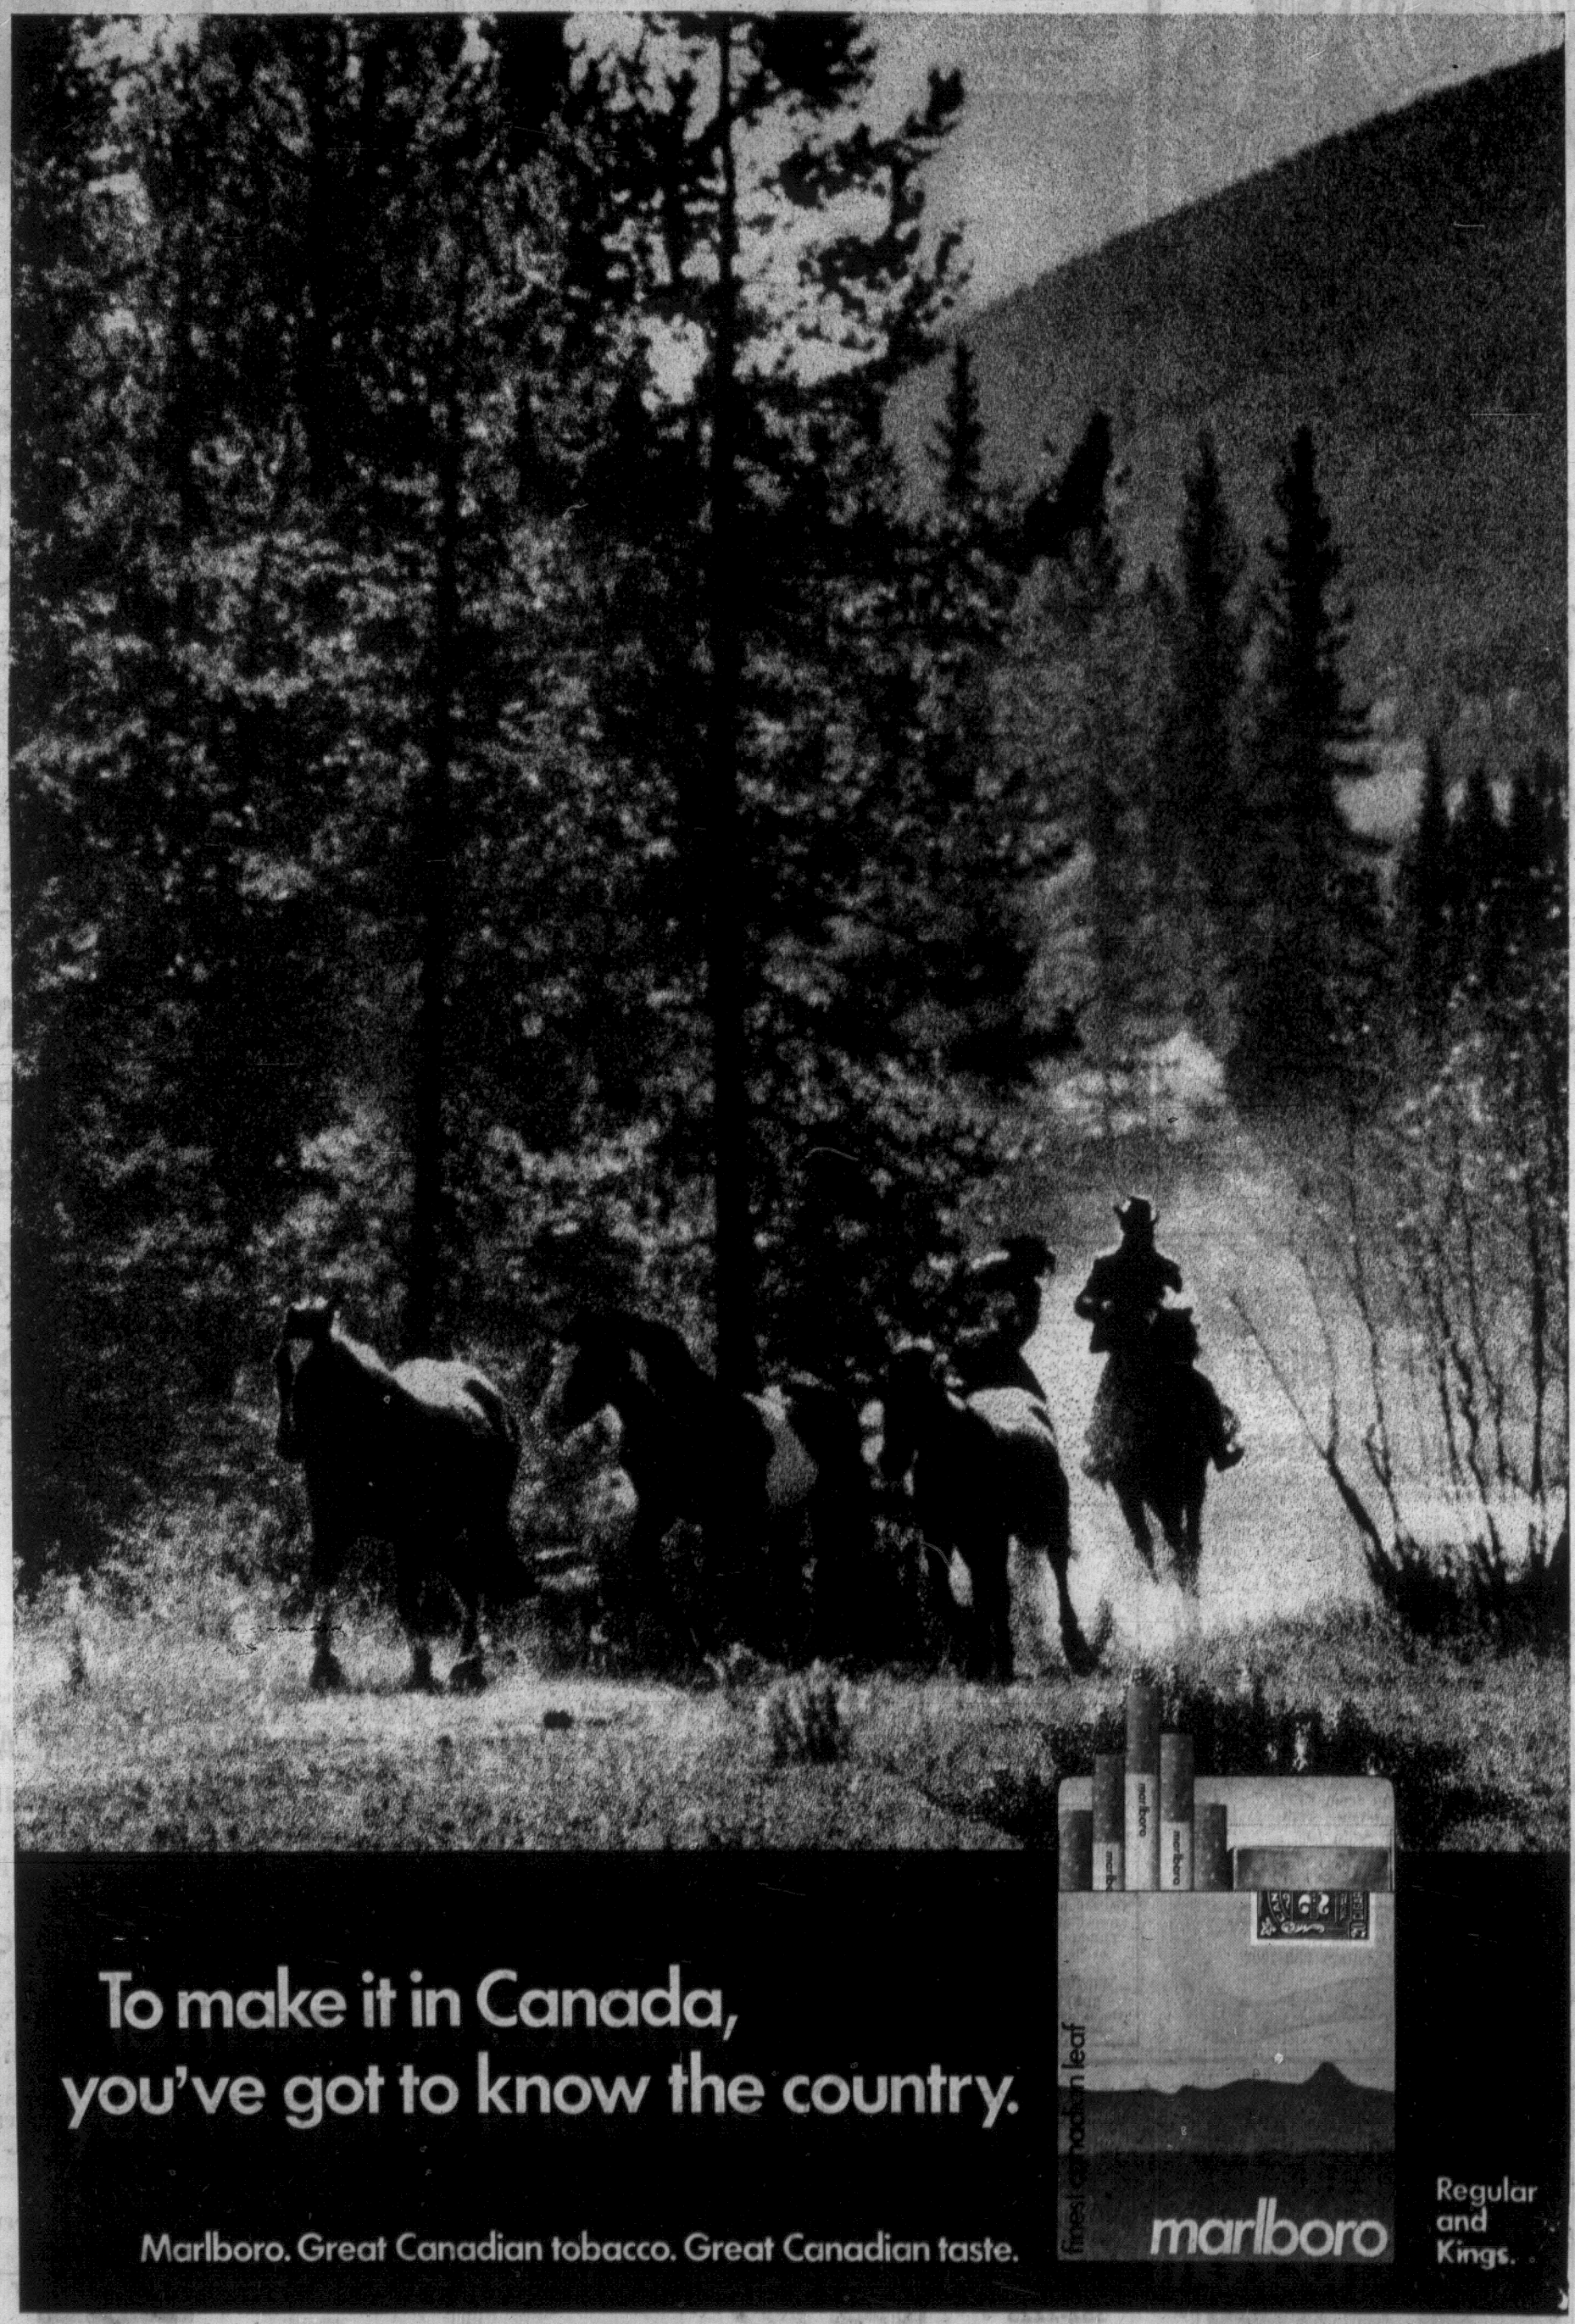

Jan Van Eesteren said in an interview that "they are aware of our equipment and we are in continuous negotiation with them on other applications of our equipment."

The Quebec government now has several Polaroid machines which make identification cards with the bearer's photograph for security guards and civil servants. Each machine cost $3,610.

Polaroid is "very much interested" in reports that the Quebec government is considering such a system, Van Eesteren said, but Polaroid knew no more about the system under consideration than has appeared in the press.

Racer Charged

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Racing car driver George Eaton of Toronto, charged with speeding on Highway 400 near here, was remanded in traffic court to next March 9. Provincial police charged Eaton with doing 90 miles an hour in a 60-miles-an-hour zone last Sept. 29.

Consumer Protection Aim of Meeting

By FRED HAMILTON

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives from nine provinces were to gather today to determine how best to co-operate in protecting the consumer against fraud and to lay the basis for co-ordinated consumer protection legislation across Canada.

Alberta was the only province to be without representation at the conference, called by Bert Lawrence, Ontario financial and consumer affairs minister.

Mr. Lawrence said Wednesday the conference was called because the federal government has launched "a large and vigorous program of consumer protection," and all governments are under increasing public pressure to provide better protection.

"The time is opportune for all 11 governments to be moving together in the field," he said at a news conference.

"It will be too late five years from now, when each province has gone its own direction, to do anything positive in co-ordinating consumer protection efforts."

WILL DISCUSS CODE

Agenda items include uniformity of consumer laws and the possibility of a common consumer-protection code; reciprocal enforcement of consumer law; consumer education; warranties and guarantees; credit reporting; standard forms of contracts, and franchises and referral sales.

Also on the agenda is a discussion of charter flights and travel agencies, repair services, home improvement services, leasing, layaway plans, hearing aids, correspondence courses, contest prizes, dance studies and computer dating services.

Provincial representatives are: Dr. G. A. Frecker, Newfoundland minister of provincial affairs; T. Earle Hickey, Prince Edward Island minister of finance; Ralph Fiske, Nova Scotia provincial secretary; William Tetley, Quebec minister of financial institutions, companies and co-operatives; Ben Hanuschak, Manitoba minister of consumer, corporate and internal services; D. V. Heald, Saskatchewan attorney-general; Mr. Lawrence, and senior administrators from British Columbia and New Brunswick.

The conference, most of it to be held behind closed doors, was to open at 10 a.m. EST today and end at noon Friday.

Calgary Inquiry Winds Up

CALGARY (CP) — A public inquiry which dug for 21 days into the squabbles and operation of civic government held its final hearing Wednesday.

Mayor Rod Sykes asked for the hearings last spring to dispel rumors of civic mismanagement and this autumn found himself surrounded by controversy and dissent.

Thefts from the Calgary Transit System, which sparked the police investigation that led to rumors Mr. Sykes wanted quashed, were dealt with at the opening session in late September.

Mr. Justice W. G. Morrow listened for nine days to tales of petty thefts, large thefts and the involvement of an alderman in the removal of an apple tree from city property to the home of one of his sons.

Mr. Justice Morrow adjourned the inquiry for two weeks to return to his Northwest Territories court and returned in mid-October to deal with political interference in the execution of police duties.

EVIDENCE CONFLICTS

Conflicting evidence was given on the level of police morale and the relationship between the police force and its governing body, the police commission.

The third session, in early November, also touched on security arrangements at city hall.

Treasurer H. G. Arscott told the inquiry a lack of supervision, not poor security arrangements, resulted in thefts from a cash-counting room.

He said the finance department needs reorganization, but he does not intend to do it because he is resigning.

Freight Rate Dips

REGINA (CP) — A new reduced schedule of rail freight rates for shipments of Saskatchewan potash to the west coast should be ready to be put into effect by Dec. 1, Mineral Resources Minister A. C. Cameron said Wednesday.

The schedule provides for an 11 per cent reduction in rates. Cameron said it was hoped that the reduction could be effected when the move was announced two weeks ago, but bookkeeping adjustments have delayed the action.

Plant Planned

SMOKEY LAKE, Alta. (CP) — A $610,000 alfalfa-pelleting plant is being built here to take advantage of the strong market for the legume in Japan.

The plant, 60 miles northwest of Edmonton, is expected to employ 25 to 30 persons, George Kozub, plant president, said Wednesday.

Wider Ban Urged

CLARESHOLM, Alta. (CP) — This community has decided to ask all municipalities in the province to ban the use of non-returnable soft drink and beer bottles.

A resolution to this effect was passed unanimously by council Tuesday after Mayor Ernie Patterson told council a recent ban on non-returnable bottles by Claresholm had received national publicity.

He said he received letters of support from service clubs as well as other towns and cities. The action was taken to prevent a broken glass problem in town streets and is to go into effect Dec. 1.

Decision Reversed

CALGARY (CP) — A government decision to continue operation of the Baker Memorial Sanatorium is "another instance" of the opposition Progressive Conservative "running the government without the benefit of the civil services," says Leader Peter Lougheed.

The Social Credit government announced Nov. 1 the tuberculosis treatment centre would be closed at the end of the year but the decision was reversed Wednesday with the sanatorium to continue indefinitely.

Sale Criticized

EDMONTON (CP) — The proposed sale of Ryerson Press has been criticized in a letter sent Wednesday to Prime Minister Trudeau by the students and faculty of the University of Alberta's School of Library Science. An official of the United Church of Canada, owner of Ryerson Press, said earlier the church will go ahead Dec. 1 with the sale to McGraw Hill of Canada Ltd., unless the government can propose an acceptable alternative.

EDMONTON (CP) — An increase in motorcycle fatalities in the younger age group was described as "a little alarming" by Alberta's chief coroner Wednesday. Dr. M. M. Cantor said there were 17 motorcycle operators killed in Alberta from May 30 to Oct. 10, varying in age from 14 to 23.

Fishing Ban Could Last 5 Years

WINNIPEG (CP) — Federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis says the current fishing ban on Lake Winnipeg could last up to five years but that the final result could be beneficial to lake fishermen.

Davis, who is attending a meeting of resource ministers here, said today the ban may have the effect of replenishing the fish population.

Commercial fishing was banned on the lake last spring when high concentrations of mercury were found in Lake Winnipeg fish.

Davis said the ban could last up to five years and almost definitely would continue for at least one year.

He said that prior to the ban a number of undersized fish were being netted.

U.S. Trade Expert Not a Traveller

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representative Wilbur D. Mills has never ventured out of the Western Hemisphere in his 61 years, yet he is recognized as one of the leading U.S. experts on foreign trade.

It was this expertise that resulted in his writing a foreign trade bill marking the United States's first move toward a more restrictive import policy in more than 30 years.

And on the basis of this expertise, Mills says critics of the measure, which passed the House of Representatives last week, are off base when they say the new quotas may seriously harm friendly foreign nations.

"That just isn't true," the Arkansas Democrat who heads the House of Representatives ways and means committee said in an interview.

Doing his homework well accounts for much of Mills' expertise and success in sterling controversial legislation through troubled congressional waters.

HELD IN HIGH REGARD

No colleague has ever accused him of trying to misrepresent or mislead.

He is regarded as a model of how a member of Congress should conduct himself publicly and privately.

He has no outside business interests, accepts no financial honorariums and doesn't itemize income tax deductions even though it would save him money.

Mills' private life follows the conservative and retiring pattern of his public life.

He and his wife were high school sweethearts in Kensett, Ark. They have been married 36 years and still live in the modest Washington apartment they moved into when Mills came to Congress in 1939.

The Washington social circuit sees little of them.

"We just enjoy staying at home," the 61-year-old Mills said. "We read a lot. I have to read to keep up with my work and with the changes going on in the world."

Prisoner's Death Sparks Reform Call

BY STEVE HUME

A coroner's jury recommended Wednesday night that the provincial government overhaul the Mental Health Act to get speedier treatment and more efficient psychiatric facilities for prisoners.

The six-man jury deliberated 65 minutes after hearing evidence from the final four witnesses at the third session of an inquest into the death of Wilkinson Road inmate James Oliver Erdman, Oct. 19.

Greater Victoria Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre presided over the inquest at the Saanich court.

The jury ruled that Erdman died from skull fractures, extensive brain damage and internal injuries suffered when he jumped head-first some 35 feet to a concrete floor at the jail.

NOT SUICIDE

It ruled that the 23-year-old man, who was serving an eight-month sentence for assaulting a police officer, did not commit suicide, but killed himself "while the balance of his mind was disturbed."

"We recommend that psychiatric facilities and personnel be made available at all times upon the request of the attending medical staff, to any individual serving sentence.

"We recommend that the Mental Health Act of British Columbia be revised to accommodate the previous recommendation," the jury told St. Jorre.

PARANOIA

Previous evidence from medical personnel revealed that although Erdman was suffering recurring psychosis in the form of drug-induced hallucinations and paranoia, he was never seen or treated by a psychiatrist.

When Erdman had been transferred to Oakalla with a view to having him treated at Riverview mental hospital, he was treated by a general practitioner for 10 days, sedated and sent back.

The jury had been told Erdman was not eligible for treatment by a Riverview psychiatrist until he had been committed under the Mental Health Act.

'BLOWN MIND'

But he could not be committed under the act unless he had first seen a psychiatrist. And there was no psychiatrist available to prisoners such as Erdman.

The jury had also been told earlier that Erdman's mental illness had been caused by excessive use of hallucinogenic drugs which had "literally blown his mind."

Wednesday night the jury heard from two witnesses who gave evidence as to the gravity of Erdman's illness.

The Rev. Harold Gordon Walker, part-time Anglican chaplain at the Wilkinson Road jail, said he had recognized early that "Jim Erdman was a man in great need of help and was seeking help."

'COULDN'T BEAR IT'

He said the excessive use of drugs had damaged Erdman's mental balance and that a subsequent separation and divorce proceeding by his wife had added to the emotional burden.

"He could stand life no longer ... He couldn't bear it," Walker said.

"He spoke of the snakes in his mind. He spoke of the great terror in his mind. He spoke of the Devil possessing him. He said that God and the Devil were battling over him and that God was too weak to win."

'IT IS MISTAKE'

The chaplain told the jury he thought "it is a mistake to throw drunks in jail or to throw drug people in jail.

"Somehow, somewhere we have to do something to help the people of our society who are in trouble."

He called for better psychiatric facilities and more "co-operation between the services that minister to people."

Former Wilkinson Road inmate Henry Streit of Duncan gave evidence that he became aware of bizarre behavior by Erdman and requested aid from prison officials.

They were sympthetic, he said, but their hands were tied with the red tape of the Mental Health Act.

Streit said he became concerned when Erdman started following individuals around all day mimicking their every motion and staring at them.

"I went and I asked to see the acting deputy warden. I told him I thought he (Erdman) might be explosive — that he might do something rash to someone else or that someone might do something to him.

"I said, 'you've got to help him,' I mentioned Riverview.

"But he (warden) said he was tied up in red tape. They wouldn't let him do it, even though he knew it was right."

EXPLORER'S VISIT DOUBTED

Juan de Fuca Name in Dire Straits

By BOB MITCHELL

It would be ironic indeed if Victoria's new community college was named after a Greek pilot called Apostolos Valerianos — better remembered as Juan de Fuca.

For many years historians have doubted de Fuca even saw the entrance to the strait that bears his name.

More recently, however, local residents with a talent for association did a double take over a proposal to name southern Vancouver Island's newest educational institution after the pilot.

The college was tentatively named Juan de Fuca College in getting it approved by voters in an October plebiscite.

It has been pointed out the name doesn't lend itself to things like headlines, college cheers or sweatshirts.

School board chairman Carron Jameson said one of the first tasks of the college council will be to select a permanent name.

He said other suggestions include Quadra, Thunderbird, De Cosmos, Victoria and Laporte, but added he likes Juan de Fuca.

"I have heard people say it might propose rude remarks, but I was rather astonished to hear that," Jameson said.

Allan McCallum, acting principal of the Institute of Adult Studies, said students and teachers are "generally averse" to naming the college after the Greek pilot.

"The name Juan de Fuca has some merit, and if pronounced properly could be quite appropriate," he said.

Cory Holob, who will sit on the college council as superintendent of the Saanich Peninsula school district, said he had "no positive or negative reaction" to Juan de Fuca, but commented:

"I understand it basically has some dangers embodied in it in terms of young people."

Trustee Daphne Temple of the Greater Victoria school board would like to see the college called Camosun, which was the name of the Indian village at the present site of Victoria before the arrival of white settlers.

"I would like to see an Indian name, not a Spanish name," she said. "Now they can't even prove he (de Fuca) was up here."

Engaged in the service of the viceroy of New Spain (Mexico), de Fuca was apparently sent north on a voyage of exploration along the Pacific coast in 1592.

Back in Venice a few years later, the pilot said the strait he claimed to have discovered about 47 degrees north of the equator was the much sought-after northwest passage to the Atlantic Ocean.

Historians have speculated he either made the story up or got it from the Indians along the coast.

Haddock Raps Other Councils For Aid Abuse

Mayor Courtney Haddock today asked why other Greater Victoria municipalities are not spending their $1 per capita provincial tourism grant to aid tourist promotion.

Haddock said he agrees with Premier Bennett who said Wednesday the grant should not be used for other purposes.

Victoria uses its grant properly, Haddock maintains.

'REDIRECT GRANT'

Haddock said Victoria is an established tourist area and the provincial grant should be "redirected" from the Visitors Bureau towards reinforcing actual tourist attractions.

Without naming the other Greater Victoria municipalities, Haddock said: "If the tourist industry is so lucrative to businesses here, why don't all municipalities turn over that grant to the Visitor's Bureau — in full"

Asked if Victoria pays its provincial grant to the bureau, Haddock said "I think it's paying more than its share."

Premier Bennett warned Wednesday he might take some action if the $1 per capita grant is not spent on tourism.

HADDOCK RAPPED

Deputy Travel Industry Minister Ron Worley and Visitors Bureau president Pat Frumento had also criticized Mayor Haddock for saying the bureau should be scrapped.

Haddock said today he thinks the bureau "is doing a good job, but the job is not necessary." He said the "bulk" of the bureau's budget goes to salaries.

The bureau's girls "work like beavers" to send out "97,000 pieces of mail to 97,000 visitors who are already in the city."

The bureau's money should "not be wasted in scatter-shot advertisements in the United States."

The redirected tourist grant could go towards upgrading Craigdarroch Castle or into expanding and improving the Sunset Ceremony.

Haddock reiterated his earlier statements that a user's tax imposed on hotel rooms would be a fairer way to pay for extra tourist promotion than spreading the load on the homeowner.

He also said the Visitors Bureau work "could easily be done by private enterprise."

At present the industry itself is only providing a "fraction" of the cost of the bureau.

"If the tourist industry is so lucrative, so vibrant, so important — on the top of the list — why don't they close ranks and do something for themselves?"

'APPALLING'

"It seems appalling to me that the mayor should insult the people who do work hard in the tourist industry — and there are very few of them."

Worley, developing a theme established earlier Wednesday by Bennett, said Victoria not only may be using the grant for other purposes but a municipal business tax increase for tourist purposes of a few years ago now appears to be largely absorbed by general revenue.

Bennett's office released figures saying visitors to B.C. this year increased by 11 per cent.

House Costs Rise Ahead of Incomes

Incomes have not kept up with the cost of housing, a seminar on housing was told this morning.

J. Everett Brown, chairman of the B.C. Housing Management Commission, said incomes have roughly tripled between 1947 and 1967 while the general price level has doubled.

But the housing cost has probably increased by about four times "and this has really brought about the crunch."

Brown, the retired deputy municipal affairs minister in British Columbia, said the point has been reached where a new look must be taken at housing.

He listed these factors in the increased costs:

1. Land. While there is no scarcity in the physical sense (urban land in B.C. occupies less than ½ of 1 per cent of all land), the price of land increases as the number of persons per acre rises. Lot frontages used to be 40 feet, now they are 60, 70 and 80 feet. If there are three lots per acre against 12, the price of land is four times as much;

2. Services. Cost of most municipal services is proportional to the miles of street frontages and therefore the tax load. Brown said "we have to accept we either forego something else for 80 foot frontages or we settle for smaller frontages;"

3. Building costs. There have been increases in the efficiency of on-site labor. He "suspected" that construction workers wages have increased faster than others. He suggested "we may have to settle for cheaper design. Ranch houses may be very nice but perhaps we can't really afford them;"

4. Financing. Twenty-five years ago there were 4½ per cent mortgages. Today the interest rate is 10½ per cent. This increase alone is 40 per cent, he said, but financing costs run to six times as much because a "very much larger" sum has to be borrowed.

Briefly discussing rental public housing for people, Brown said there is no way of eliminating poverty unless incomes are distributed equally and he didn't know of any country which does this.

There was "nothing peculiar" about people at the low end of the income scale, nor about tenants in public housing.

The housing seminar, at the Empress Hotel, was sponsored by the Capital Region branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada. It ended this afternoon.

Hearing Dates On Murder Set for Trio

Preliminary hearing dates for three men charged with the non-capital murder of part-time cabdriver Gerald Mulholland were set today in Victoria Provincial Court.

Judge William Ostler set aside Dec. 23, 28, and 29 for the trio, William Larlham, 20, of CFB Esquimalt, Terrance Parsons, 20, of 1339 Newport and Gary Smith, 18, of CFB Esquimalt.

Larlham today was represented by lawyer Brian Smith. Calvin Becker represented Parsons and Dr. J. J. Gow appeared for Smith.

Mayor Won't Let Reid Interest Go

Mayor Courtney Haddock said today he is "not going to let the Reid interest leave Victoria."

Just returned from a trip to Vancouver to see developer J. A. Reid, Haddock said he had confirmed another meeting with Reid for Dec. 15.

Wednesday's meeting was "very satisfactory," he said, but declined to discuss details.

Asked if a newly-formed council after the Dec. 12 election might change his position, Haddock said it wouldn't.

A new council "doesn't change economics, philosophy, or certainly the policy of the city," Haddock said.

"I am not going to let the Reid interest leave Victoria — not if I can help it."

Civil Servants Dislike Contract

Close to 1,000 federal employees in Greater Victoria, members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, got the word on an arbitrated new contract Wednesday and it left them unhappy.

They will receive salary increases of 7 per cent, effective Oct. 1, 1968 and two increases of 6 per cent each, effective Oct. 1 of last year and this year. Their new contract ends Nov. 23, 1971.

The arbitration settlement, announced in Ottawa, covers 22,000 skilled and semi-skilled tradesmen in the federal public service across the country.

Locally, the employees involved work at HMC Dockyard, the Rocky Point arsenal and government's facilities at Patricia Bay.

Machinists, drivers, heavy equipment operators, ammunition workers, woodworkers, mechanics and electricians are among the trade groups involved.

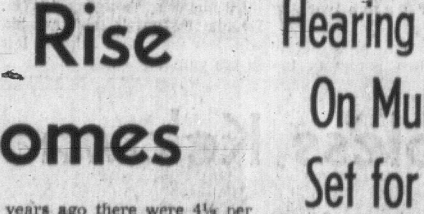

"They're not happy with it," was the way regional representative Tom Dalzell summarized the reaction today.

He joined William Doherty, the Alliance's first vice-president, in noting the arbitration award fails to take into account wages being paid in similar fields outside the public service.

Pollution Head To Mount Pulpit

B.C. Pollution Control Direction William Venables will adress an interdenominational service at the Roman Catholic Queenswood Chapel Sunday at 7 p.m.

Members of Anglican, Roman Catholic and United Churches in the district will attend the service.

Arthur Mayse . . .

WHEN WE LAST WENT up the Island Highway, autumn was deepening and a phenomenon grown familiar through a long summer had all but vanished.

This was the young wanderer companioned or alone. His tribe took to the long roads of Canada in numbers not matched since the Depression.

Distance was no barrier. They travelled by thumb with their worldly goods in their packsacks. Some were looking for work in a year when jobs were hard to find. But very many others were simply out to see the country in a summer that went on as if it could never end.

The provincial camps knew them. Freeman "Skipper" King—never a man to turn youth away—made room for them in jam-packed Goldstream park, and found them better guests than many a vacationist on wheels.

(Park naturalist King will not thank me for telling you this, but a New York girl in road-worn boots once kissed him goodbye, smack on a leathery cheek.)

Up at Campbell River on a rainy night, a resident prodded an offering into a Goodwill bin. She squeaked when her fingers encountered fur. But it wasn't a bear that had inserted itself into the hutch — merely a bearded hichhiker who had found a place to lay his head.

Where are they now? Gone, most of them. Scattered to their home-cities across the land. The Victoria Cool-aid intake, which averaged over 60 a night all through the summer and once in September reached 82, descended sharply as fall set in.

Most of the roving young who remain are on their own and still looking for work to tide them through the winter. And, in this year of poor prospects, not finding it.

BEACON HILL'S Queenie is gone now, this life departed after worthy service and a tranquil retirement. But one day as she stood plump and placid in the enclosure she shared with other park creatures a three-year-old boy gave Queenie the eye.

He said to his mother, "Look at the big deer."

Mrs. Frances D. Watts of 411 Pendergast Street offers this anecdote to underline a point.

"It would be ridiculous if our children knew what a whale looked like," she writes, "but had never seen a horse."

With that in mind, Mrs. Watts hopes the sturdy Tally-ho steeds won't be exiled from our scene. She also offers an idea which as another of the late Queenie's admirers, I'm glad to pass on.

"Perhaps," she suggests (looking hopefully to Victoria parks branch) "another retired horse will be found to take over Queenie's important work of letting our very young people know what a real live horse lookes like."

Sound horse-sense, and I'm all for it.

THE NEXT BEST THING to fishing is viewing a good film on the subject. I can report with pleasure that Victoria newspaperman Ian Street and wife Pauline have produced a dandy.

Coho on the Fly, they've titled it, and I found it a color documentary with a difference.

Though its finned heroes are the tackle-straining coho salmon of Cowichan Bay's fall run, the concentration isn't all on strike, battle and capture. There are lovely shots of valley, bay and river. The camera pauses for a sunrise viewed from the Malahat. It tracks an eagle, lingers on a blue heron, and indulges in some man-overboard comic relief.

Also, there's a theme song — Valley of the Sun, with music by Alex Young of the Legislative Press Gallery and lyric by Mrs. Street.

The coho sequences, with master fisherman and lure-maker Bruce Colegrave on the rod, are among the finest I've ever seen.

This is the third production by Village Films, name chosen by the Streets for their partnership. They're hoping it will be bought as a sponsored special.

What rocks me is that Ian — one of the separated brethren who toil for The Daily What's-its-Name next door — is not himself a fisherman. In view of the superlatively good job he's done on Coho, that passeth understanding!

BILL WALKER

Sure, this is a frantic era in which we live, but still, what is upcoming at the CNE Stadium in Toronto on Saturday has all the characteristics of a meeting between two teams in a complete state of shock.

This is the celebrated Grey Cup football final between the two best representative football teams in all of Canada. The names on the jersey will designate them officially as Calgary and Montreal. But don't you dare believe it. It is a November article of faith that this game is between The East, and The West. No others.

And if both the Stamps, from the frozen west, and the Alouettes, from the fun-loving capital of the east, are in an unsettled state, it's understandable. Besides, it will probably help to explain why it is that two third-place clubs are in the final for the first time.

And if westerners believe the Stamps may have been shaken by events of the past week or so, the Als have an excellent case in point too. For after all, their third-place finish was only a matter of position. A tie with Hamilton in the final game on the final day of the season, left them there. It was that kind of a grab bag in the east. It also left them with the right to meet Toronto Argos in Toronto, and then Hamilton in the final. They were up to this severe test, even though there was disbelief in Hamilton at the finish. The Ticats took their loss badly, which they often do. But for the Als, it was a case of refusing to believe in their shortcomings.

Bewildering only is the fact that they came from last place last year to where they are today, in the Grey Cup for the first time in 14 long years. And in that regard they may be much better than many in the west give them credit for. Besides, they went into the playoffs minus two of their regulars. Dennis Duncan and Bob McCarthy were kicked out for getting bombed in downtown Montreal.

Out west, everyone has been limp since a week ago Wednesday, perhaps even more so after Sunday. That's when the Stamps proved they weren't career playoff losers to Saskatchwean, after all. And it took some doing, in the final three seconds yet!

Before that, they had put a good knock on that third-place charge. Because actually they finished in a tie with Edmonton for second. Nobody was going to catch Saskatchewan, who simply ran out of players at the end. And then the Stamps were forced to go all out to dispose of the Eskimos in the semifinal, and at Edmonton, too. It was then they came up with their first paralyzer. They bopped the Roughriders at Taylor Field, 28-11. This should have been the indicator of things to come, but the Stamps somehow lost at home a week ago to set up that epic clash at Regina last Sunday.

Which brings things up to date until Saturday. In Toronto, the field is reported to be in good condition and it is hoped it will still be that way when they roll back the tarpaulin Saturday. Dry and firm are the terms used to describe turf conditions, but things could be different at game time because the forecast is for wet snow or rain Friday, continuing into Saturday.

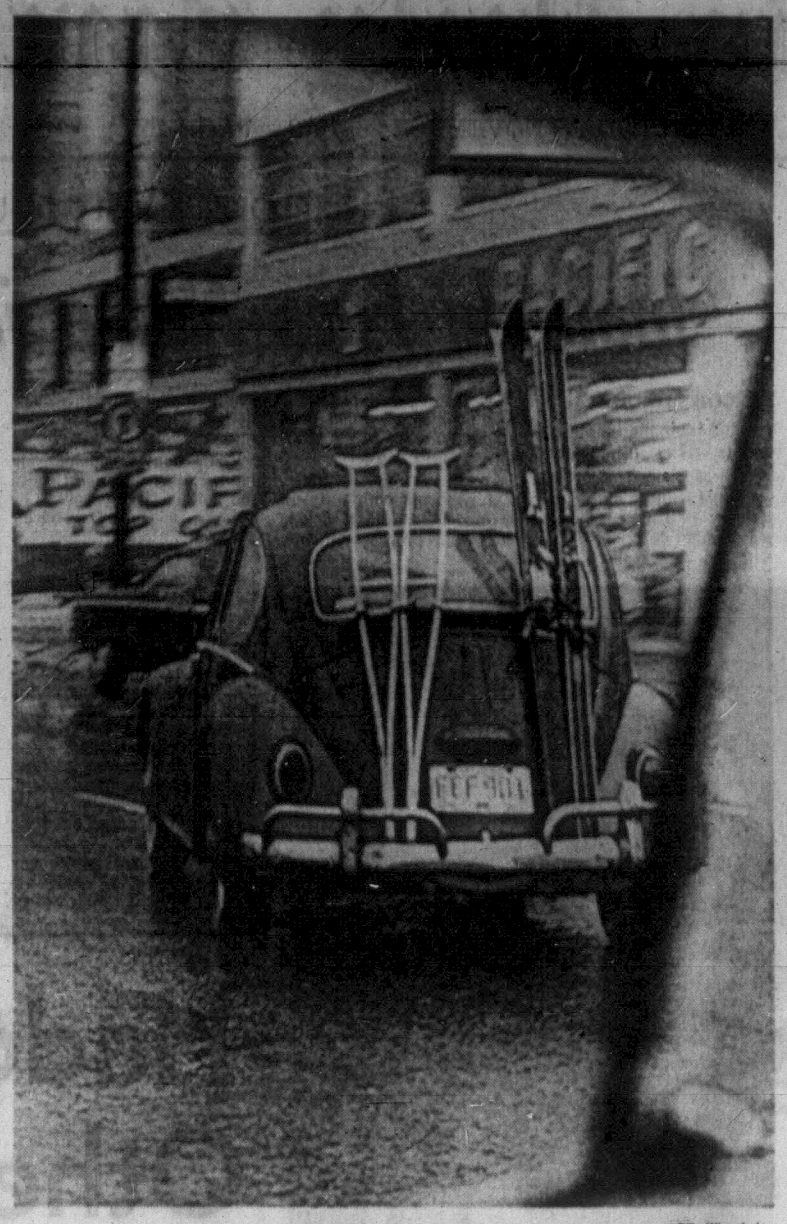

This naturally brings about a number of what laughingly later may be referred to as doubtful conclusions.

However, coming from the source that last summer did predict a Grey Cup berth for the Stamps (check it and see), also suggested that as a long shot the Als had a chance (Toronto was the first pick) and also gave you the local computerized version of the finals (Calgary and Montreal), it does appear evident that all has not been completely disgraceful here in the past.

And so, without further ado, and having completed a comprehensive evaluation of the two clubs, as to ability, dedication, and performance, the belief is that Calgary will reign supreme, in a high-scoring battle on a dry field, and even if it is played in a bog.

It may not be an epic to rival that beaut at Regina. But don't make plans to leave early, either. Not with the Stampeders and Alouettes in their present state of suspense.

It will be Calgary by seven, if you must know.

Dennis Doing Just Fine Without Brother's Help

By The Canadian Press

When Dennis Hull jumped directly to Chicago Black Hawks in 1964 from junior ranks, there was some talk around the National Hockey League that the only reason was big brother Bobby.

The Golden Jet had just racked up 43 goals and 44 assists in the 1963-64 season, the fifth consecutive year in which he had scored more than 30 goals for the Hawks.

Some people suspected Dennis of finding a ride on the tail of his brother's sweater.

But since leaving St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, Dennis has thrown water on the theory by becoming one of the Hawks' steadiest performers.

Last season, the 26-year-old left winger scored 17 goals and assisted on 35 others for 52 points, 12 less than his best year ever.

SCORES SEVENTH

He fired his seventh goal of this campaign Wednesday night and sparked the Hawks to a 5-3 win over Montreal Canadiens.

In other games Wednesday, Los Angeles Kings dumped California Golden Seals 3-1, Buffalo Sabres and Pittsburgh Penguins played to a 4-4 tie and Philadelphia Flyers upset New York Rangers 3-1.

At Chicago, the Point Anne, Ont., brothers accounted for five points as the Hawks moved four points ahead of the idle St. Louis Blues in the West Division standings.

Dennis added one assist to his goal while Bobby tallied his 12th goal and two assists, moving up to third in NHL scoring with 27 points, eight back of Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins who leads with 35 points.

MARSHALL HITS TWICE

At Pittsburgh, left winger Don Marshall, sparked a three-goal Buffalo second period, scoring two goals as the Sabres picked up their third tie of their maiden NHL year. The ties plus four wins moved the Sabres into a last-place deadlock with Toronto Maple Leafs in the East Division, each with 11 points.

Rookie Bob Kelly celebrated his 20th birthday at Philadelphia by scoring the winning goal early in the second period against the Rangers. The win snapped a string of seven ties between the two clubs and New York's four-game winning streak.

At Oakland, Mike Byers whipped in two goals as the Kings broke a string of five successive losses. The loss was the Seals' fifth in a row.

Hapless Kelowna Victimized Again

VERNON (CP) — Vernon Essos plunged Kelowna deeper into the cellar in British Columbia Junior Hockey League action Wednesday night, whipping the Buckaroos 8-2.

Sparked by a two-goal performance from Ed Johnstone, Vernon took a 3-1 lead in the first period, added two unanswered goals in the second and kept the pressure on in the final frame.

Three Named To Hall

TORONTO (CP) — Two Edmonton men and the captain of the first Montreal team to win the Grey Cup were named today to the Canadian Football Hall of Fame.

Gord Perry, a star halfback with Montreal Winged Wheelers when they won the 1931 Canadian title, was the Montrealer named.

The other two honored were Johnny Bright, a fullback with Edmonton Eskimos in the 1950s, and Ken Montgomery president of the Eskimos when they won their first Grey Cup in 1954.

Colombia Trips Canada In World Ball Tourney

CARGAGENA, Colombia (CP) — Colombia struck for eight runs in the first three innings and coasted to a 10-4 victory over Victoria Centennials, Canada's representatives, Wednesday in the world amateur baseball championships.

It was Canada's fifth loss in five games in the tournament.

In other games Wednesday, defending-champion Cuba crushed Holland, 10-1, to win its fifth straight game, Nicaragua defeated Italy, 6-2, and Venezuela beat The Netherlands Antilles, 7-2.

Canadian starter Glennis Scott of Brandon, couldn't tame the Colombians who got nine hits in the first three innings.

Reliever Roy Rowey of Moose Jaw, pitched the last three innings, yeilding six hits and two runs.

Colombian pitcher Orlando Garcia went the distance for the winners, scattering seven hits. Three of the Canadian runs came in the last inning.

Shortstop Dave McKay of Vancouver hit a single, double and a triple for Canada and scored twice. McKay, 20, leads the Canadian team with five hits.

Yves Blanchard of Montreal collected one hit Wednesday and now has four.

Injuries are plaguing the winless Canadian team, with shortstop Tom McKenzie of Kitchener, out with a twisted knee, although he could be back for today's game with Guatemala.

Centre-fielder Doug Hill of Victoria was hit by a pitch Wednesday and had to leave the game. Pitcher Bob Mabee of Victoria is out with the flu.

West Blizzard Sends Stamps On Their Way

The Stamps were snowed out of their own park after only 20 minutes.

"That's why we have to go through more than a loosening-up drill here now," said Stampeder coach Jim Duncan. "This has to be a full practice . . . we don't have much time."

The Stampeders and Alouettes arrived at Toronto's International Airport just minutes apart, but Montreal was able to hold a full-scale session at the Autostade before leaving home.

The Calgary club was still hurting from its deep-freeze win over Saskatchewan Roughriders Sunday in the deciding game of the Western Football Conference final in Regina.

"Several of the fellows were chilled Sunday and they aren't 100 per cent," said Calgary trainer Larry Chace. "We just have to hope that none of them get the flu while they're in a weakened condition.

"The only two fellows still seriously bothered because of the frost are Larry Robinson and John Helton." It was Robinson's last-second field goal that gave the Stampeders a 15-14 cliffhanger over the 'Riders.

After Calgary, It's Like Tropics

The Stampeders worked out at Varsity Stadium near their mid-town hotel in near-freezing temperatures, but the weather was practically tropical compared with what they had left in Calgary.

"When I woke up at home this morning I looked out the window and figured there was no way we could fly out," said head coach Jim Duncan. "The temperature was about six above and there was a real blizzard going on."

The Calgarians had little to report in the way of injuries, except the frostbite suffered by Robinson and Helton in Sunday's game. Halfback Dave Cranmer said the Stampeders are in much better shape than they were two years ago when they dropped a 24-21 game to Ottawa Rough Riders in the national final.

"I know I am," said the Sarnia, Ont., native. "I didn't get into that game in 1968. This time I have no ailments and I can't wait for the game to start."

Cranmer missed the latter part of the 1968 season with a leg injury and the last half of last season with a lung injury, but has come back this year to become an important cog in the Calgary offence.

Rookie coach Sam Etcheverry, meanwhile, checked his Montreal club into a motel near the airport. The motel hung out a sign proclaiming: Bonne Chance Alouettes.

Etcheverry is hoping to turn the tables against the West for depriving him of the Grey Cup in three successive years when he quarterbacked the Als. Edmonton Eskimos were the winners in 1954-55-56.

Als' Injuries Classed as Minor

The Als came through their two-game, total-point Eastern Conference final with Hamilton Tiger-Cats nursing only the usual minor ailments that they normally faced through the year, with the exception of offensive guard Barry Randall, out with a leg injury.

Etcheverry admits the Als have been fortunate this season as far as injuries are concerned although they'll be without the services of Steve Booras, all-star defensive end.

Booras and Steve Smear, both first-year men, made outstanding contributions to the Alouettes' rise from obscurity as they menaced opposing quarterbacks from their end positions. When Booras was injured, Etcheverry was fortunate to have Walt Highsmith in camp to fill the breach.

And at defensive halfback, the Als lost Richie Davis and Lewis Cook, both of whom pleased Montreal fans during the year.

But again, the Als were bailed out with the arrival for the playoffs of two National Football League veterans—Bobby Lee Thompson and Ted Alflan.

The Canadian Football League's outstanding player awards will be announced today and talk among members of the Football Reporters of Canada covering the game was that the only shoo-in appears to be Calgary's outstanding linebacker, Wayne Harris, as the league's top lineman.

Bowlers Qualify For West Rolloffs

Out of the 13 bowlers vying for a second chance to represent Victoria in the Western Canada Fivepin bowling championships, only seven cleared the first hurdle last weekend.

The top six men and six women qualified for the Victoria squad in trials held Saturday at Gibson's Bowladrome as well as Sunday at Town and Country Lanes and Cush's Bowl A Golf Spa.

Victoria must qualify for one of three spots in the B.C. coastal zone and rolloffs, which should draw about six teams, will be held at Abbotsford in February. The three successful teams from Abbotsford will advance to the championships in April at Edmonton.

Wally Weinberger returned by topping 22 men's entries with 5,270 for 18 games, an average of 292.

Other returnees from last season's team, which finished sixth, were Norm Goldie (third), and Jake Jacob (sixth).

Failing to make the team again were John Broste, Stan Jones, Stan Gallop and Bill Cool.

June Peddlesden topped the women's division with 4,549, for an average of 252. Other returnees include Sandra Wood (second), Sena Guest (fourth) and Val Wilkinson (sixth). Newcomers are Carol Storey (third) and Evie Weinberger (fifth).

'INFANT' PLAYER FREED . . . . . TO TEAM OF HIS CHOICE

Court Supports Minor Leaguer's Cause

EDMONTON (CP) — The father of a 13-year-old boy who gained an injunction permitting his son to play for the team of his choice said Wednesday he went to court after the local hockey association told him he had no right of appeal.

An interim injunction issued Tuesday by Mr. Justice S. S. Lieberman ordered the Edmonton Metropolitan Hockey Association to transfer Mark Lindsay McDonald to any team of his choice in the association.

The EMHA had previously refused to permit his son to play for the Knights of Columbus. They said Mark was the property of the Canadian Athletic Club.

The boy's father, Hugh B. McDonald, said in an interview he asked the association for the right to appeal its decision. After being told his right to appeal did not exist, he looked to the Alberta Amateur Hockey Association for advice, but it would not help, he said.

George Harvie, president of the provincial organization, said Wednesday the AAHA recognizes the constitution of the Edmonton association.

"We make that recognition because of the local problems in hockey in Edmonton and we had to tell Mr. MacDonald we would not help him," Harvie said.

McDonald had the right to appeal to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, he said.

McDonald said the EHMA had apparently adopted regulations whereby infant hockey players became the property of certain organizations in the city but it did not notify the players or their parents of the new regulations. In asking the court to quash the EMHA's refusal to allow a transfer, McDonald said it would be in his son's best interests to play for the Knights of Columbus team. The McDonalds are Roman Catholic.

OUTDOOR SCENE

By Barry M. Thornton

During the past two years steelheaders across B.C. have become very concerned with the obvious spoiling of streams and the extensive decline of steelhead trout.

In 1969 the B.C. Wildlife Federation sponsored a workshop in Nanaimo to focus attention on the steelhead's plight. Eighty concerned steelheaders from Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island centres voiced their anxiety at that meeting. Much was discussed but little could be accomplished.

Another workshop was sponsored by the Federation for Port Coquitlam in February, 1970. At that session, 150 anglers formed the Steelhead Society of B.C.

Since that meeting in February, the elected executives, through regular monthly meetings, have made great strides towards recognition by both governments of the plight of steelhead in B.C.

A provincial organization concentrating on the preservation and betterment of steelhead fishing is a fact today and all steelheaders can feel justifiably proud of the efforts of this organization in its infant year.

As well as organizing basic matters and procedures, the Society has focused its attention on major issues affecting steelhead.

One major issue is the recognition of fish as users of water. As asinine as it sounds, fish are not classified as legitimate user of water in the B.C. Water Act. In its objectives the Society is also working towards the recognition of steelhead as a trophy fish.

A second important issue is the return of responsibility for the management of all anadromous fish (steelhead and sea-run cutthroat trout) to Federal authorities. Currently the Fish and Wildlife Branch is responsible for the management of anadromous trout. However, its efforts towards management of these species are so infinitesimal as to be a disgrace. Other than incidental studies and reports, and the necessary habitat protection that is their responsibility for all fish and wildlife, nothing major has been done by the provincial authorities to concentrate on the specific management of the steelhead trout.

Habitat protection is a, if not THE, major issue. In this regard, briefs have been submitted by the Society. These include a submission to focus attention on the serious threat to anadromous fish populations by the current Gravel Removal Order, and a brief to the Public Enquiry into the Forest Products Industry, as it effects the ecology and envirnment of streams harboring anadromous trout.

On Vancouver Island two groups of Society members have initiated local habitat protection and improvement projects, which are both dramatic and informative. Members in Nanaimo have destroyed a major log jam which for many years has acted as a barrier to seven miles of rich spawning and rearing waters. Members in Courtenay, through the sponsorship of the Courtenay Fish & Game Club, have devised a stream environment watch card to focus attention on the major problems affecting streams.

Executives met with senior members of the Fish & Wildlife Branch in July to discuss the management of steelhead. The meeting proved beneficial but the Society was pessimistic of any immediate improvement in actual steelhead management by provincial authorities.

One project initiated by the Society was an attempt to artificially rear steelhead for release in those streams which have had runs of steelhead depleted or which are near extinction.

The Society is not convinced that artificial propagation is wise for all streams. However, it does feel that there are many streams which have had their runs depleted by pollution and irresponsible land practices which could have runs re-introduced through artificial propagation.

The Society is also striving for the preservation and management of the sea-run cutthroat trout, which has a similar life pattern to the steelhead and is in even more need of protection and enhancement.

Membership in the Society now stands at 170. In a province which has well over ten thousand successful steelheaders this is certainly not a very impressive number. However, this is the infant year of the Society and a low number is expected.

In future years an improvement in membership is an absolute must if the Society is ever to speak with strength and authority.

Membership in the Society is $10 per year and can be obtained by writing to the Steelhead Society of B.C., Box 3947, Postal Station "D", Vancouver 9, B.C.

Your membership, interest, efforts, support and enthusiasm are important to the fight for better steelheading.

SELECTION TIME

Vince Di Camillo, Len Mannix and Dave Bruce scored trys for Mount View while Rick Harcus booted all three converts. Wally Smallwood counted a try, Andy Hume added a penalty goal and Doug Archibald kicked a convert for Mount Douglas.

Don Miles set the pace for Oak Bay with a try and four converts while Cam Krueger (2), Gary Townsend, John Readshaw, John Parris and Terry Morton scored the other trys for Bays.

Omniplex Turned Down By Edmonton Citizens

EDMONTON (CP) — Visions of huge conventions, the National Hockey League and the Grey Cup coming to the city went down the drain Wednesday night as taxpayers rejected a $32.5 million bylaw for construction of a covered sport, trade and convention centre.

Turning out in large numbers in the wake of a snowstorm and in temperatures below zero, ratepayers turned thumbs down on the centre, said by its boosters to be without equal in the world.

The final count Wednesday night was 38,060 or 53.97 per cent against the bylaw and 32,463 or 46.03 per cent in favor.

A simple majority was needed to pass the bylaw.

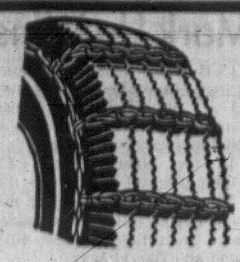

The centre, called Omniplex, had its opponents who said that the money could be better spent on housing, libraries or other projects which rated a higher priority.

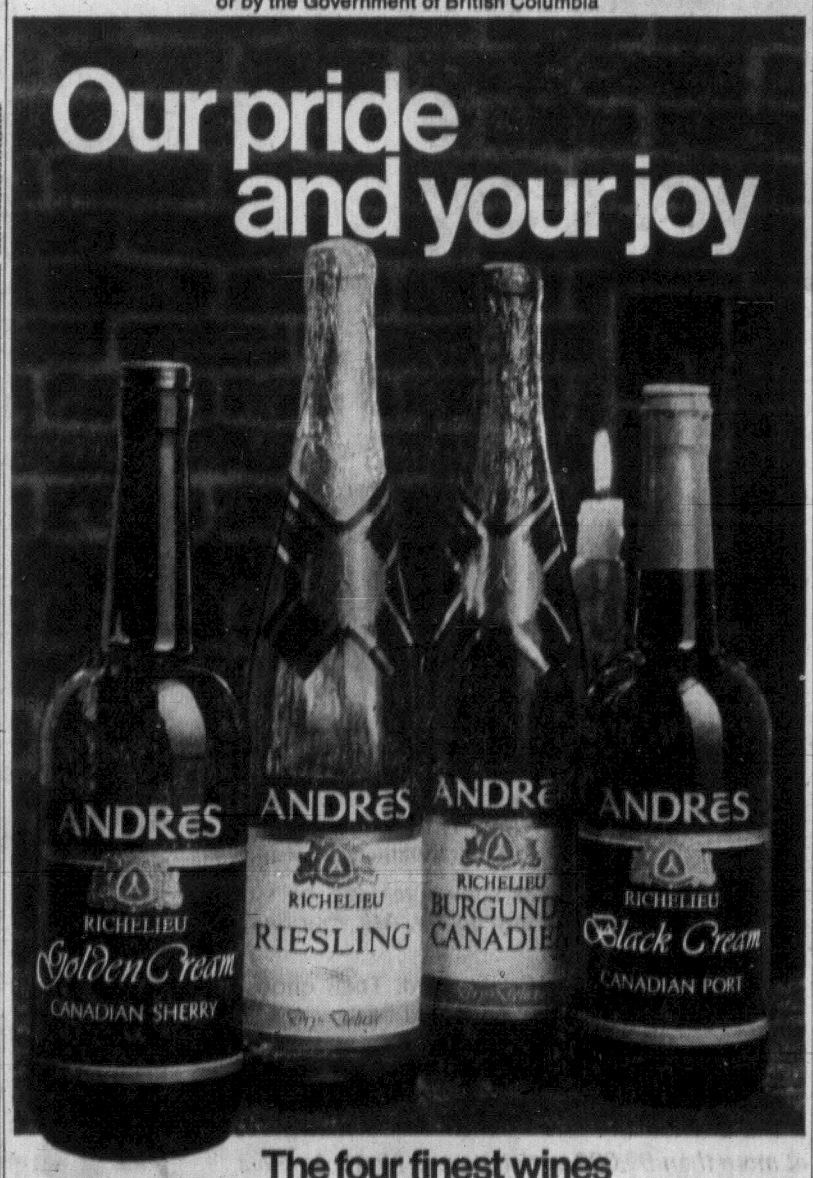

The building would have housed a covered football field, a hockey rink, track and field facilities, a convention floor, exhibition space and offices.

The covered football stadium would have held more than 40,000 spectators while the hockey rink's capacity would have been more than 19,000.

The rejection was expected to kill Edmonton's chances of obtaining an NHL franchise. William Hunter, owner of Edmonton Oil Kings of the Western Canada Hockey League, submitted an application for an NHL franchise last week.

Pro Sports Prepared To Deal With Disaster

NEW YORK (AP) — The plane crash tragedies which struck football teams from Wichita State and Marshall universities this season have focused attention on the plans devised by professional sports to deal with such potential catastrophes.

All four major professional team sports played in this country — baseball, football, basketball and hockey — have disaster plans for stocking teams devastated by accidents.

In baseball, the American and National leagues have separate plans which would create player pools from remaining teams to form a squad. The National League plan is not detailed but the American League plan goes into effect if six or more players are lost.

The National Football League has three separate plans for formulating a new team, depending on the number of casualties suffered by the affected team.

In the event a new team cannot be formed, the commissioner of football is empowered to delete the affected team's games from the standings.

The National Basketball Association has a total disaster plan but none designed to deal with partial loss of a team. Should a team be completely wiped out, the remaining teams would be permitted to protect five players with the others placed in a draft pool to stock the affected team.

In the National Hockey League, the loss of five or more players sets in motion the plan which resembles the league's summer draft. Each remaining club would protect 10 skaters and one goalie with the remaining players open to a stocking draft with players equally supplied from all the teams.

Bowl Pacts Signed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Seventh-ranked Tennessee and the Air Force Academy, which ranks 12th among the nation's collegiate football teams, signed contracts to play in the Sugar Bowl here New Year's Day.

HAWLEY SCORES ONCE

TORONTO (CP) — Jockeys Marty Gibson and Dick Armstrong both scored double wins at Greenwood Race Track Wednesday, but Sandy Hawley, trying to break a season-wins record of 485 now held by Willie Shoemaker, rode only one winner.

In boosting his total this year to 434, Hawley now has the third-highest total in history, behind Shoemaker and Jorge Velazquez, who rode 438 winners in 1967.

New Pros Leading Sea Pines Event

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Bob Barbarossa and Hubert Green, a couple of rookies, matched five-under-par 65s Wednesday for the first-round lead in the $30,000 Sea Pines open golf tournament.

The 72-hole event, which runs through Saturday, is a satellite tournament to the $100,000 Heritage Golf Classic, an invitational event that opens today at a neighboring course.

The Heritage has drawn most of the top names in the game with non-exempt players competing in the Sea Pines.

Barbarossa and Green, both 23, graduated from the PGA's player school just two weeks ago and both are making their first start in a regular tour event.

Bill Wright had a 68 with Carl Lohren, James Dent and Larry Sears at 69. The group at 70 included Doug Olson, Les Peterson, Ben Kern of Toronto and Larry Wood. Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg shot a 71.

MOVE IT!
GROOVE IT! SWING IT!

Small car size,
small car price, 6 or V-8 engine
2-doors or 4, sporty styling.

Move it! Mercury's all new little car, Comet, is what you might call a thrifty swifty. Or even a nifty swifty. You can zip past gas stations with any of Comet's three 6-cylinder engines. Or zoom along in style with Comet's performance-proven 302 cubic inch V-8. Either way, you're on regular gas... and getting small car mileage. Transmission? Choose from a floor or column-mounted 3-speed manual or opt for the extra relaxation of Comet's 3-speed Select-Shift automatic.

Groove it! Driving Mercury's new little Comet is like wearing a groovy new outfit. People notice. Yet for all its rich good looks and sporty styling, Comet is priced much lower than you'd expect. The interiors live up to Comet's promise of quality. They're bright and tastefully designed. Comfortable and roomy. With easy-to-clean cloth and vinyl seats and warm carpeting colour-keyed to match the upholstery. Comet is fun to own... and practical, too. Low initial cost, low maintenance cost and low operating cost. Who could ask for more!

Swing it! One thing about a low priced car—it makes those extra convenience options easier to own. And the new little Comet has enough options to turn it into a mini-limousine. They include an AM or AM/FM stereo radio, Whisper-Aire conditioning, tinted glass, rear-window defogger, a consolette with electric clock—even a complete GT package. With all this going for it, you might find it easy to forget that Comet is a small compact. But you'll believe it when you finally drive in for gas.

Panasonic makes enough modular stereo components to please all of the people all of the time.

These days, not having a stereo is like not having a TV. But buying a stereo is a darned lot harder than buying a TV.

There are so many kinds of stereos. Stereos that play records. Stereos that play 8-track, pre-recorded cartridge tape. Cassette tape. Or reel-to-reel tape.

At Panasonic, we think stereo.

So we've got every kind of stereo for every kind of taste and budget.

And when it comes to features, we do not skimp. Features like slide lever controls for precision adjusting. Stereo Eyes so you know when stereo is being broadcast. And inputs and outputs, so you can add on everything from a deck to your home projector.

What's more, we don't make stereos only for the home. Our portable FM/AM and cassette true stereo will work anywhere. On batteries or house current.

When you make so many stereos, it's hard to describe them all. Go down to any Panasonic dealer and see for yourself.

Then walk out with your stereo. Tailor made.

Tenants' Board 'Necessary'

Creation of an intermunicipal tenants' grievance board is a necessity, Rev. Walter Donald said this week.

"I really feel it's probably the most urgent and constructive move that low income people can take," he said.

Donald said he urged parishioners at Christ Church Cathedral Sunday to "get out of the pew and get involved in community" for projects like the tenants' board.

Donald was chairman of a social action group on poverty at an education day sponsored by the Cathedral. Other groups included schools, youth and pollution.

He said people from all income brackets must join to create a power bloc to push for social justice from the Social Credit government.

Only then, he said, will the government take action. Donald said people who want to help create a tenants' board should contact him, Rev. R. J. D. Morris of the First United Church, or Low Income Group president Walter Olszewski.

Anne Misquoted Says Charles

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles says it was a bum rap when reporters quoted his sister, Princess Anne, as saying the bald eagle was a bad choice for the U.S. national emblem.

Stories to this effect followed a White House visit by the heir to the throne and his sister last summer.

Charles told reporters Wednesday:

"The fact was that I had been idiotic enough to ask why the eagle was the emblem, and having been told that a turkey had originally been considered, Princess Anne said she thought that a bad choice."

Crime's Profits Held

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two men convicted of possessing part of the $1,200,000 "mutilated" money loot taken in a 1965 CPR Express holdup in Vancouver lost their bid Tuesday to recover $2,408 held as an exhibit in exhibit in court.

Joseph Campbell Percival, 42, and James McDougall, 37, both now free following their 2½-year sentences, had been convicted in Alberta where they were arrested.

They were apprehended following the Vancouver robbery in which four men took money which had been punched with three holes in preparation for a shipment to Ottawa where it was to be destroyed.

During subsequent trials here and in Alberta, the court was told that some of the money was passed after being "patched up."

The money which was held in Vancouver court consisted of genuine bills and coins found in the two men's possession when they were arrested.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer, in refusing their application, held that the money was obtained as a result of their passing stolen mutilated money in making various purchases. He said that the money was the proceeds of the crime for which they were arrested and convicted.

Sisters Jump To Death

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two women identified as sisters fell to their deaths Wednesday night from the seventh floor of a hotel in downtown Vancouver in what police described as an apparent double suicide.

Police identified them as May Davies, 48, and her sister, Mrs. Edith Patterson, believed to be in her 50s.

A spokesman for the Devonshire Hotel said the women booked in Tuesday morning and had paid for two days' accommodation in advance.

No note was found at the scene.

A neighbor of the sisters, Mrs. Joy Trueman, said they had been depressed recently over the recent death of Mrs. Patterson's husband and over the knowledge that a male friend was dying of cancer.

She said the sisters were quiet neighbors who went everywhere together.

Votes Cost $2

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller spent $6,704,627 in his recent successful bid for re-election — more than $2 for each vote he received. He garnered a few more than three million votes in defeating Democrat Arthur J. Goldberg.

Crash Kills Weapons Man

BOULDER CITY, Nev. (AP) — A downdraft that apparently sent a small plane diving into Lake Mead took the life of Theos Thompson, 52, top man in nuclear-weapons development and testing and a member of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission.

Thompson was killed along with two other passengers when the National Park Service plane crashed in 300 feet of water Wednesday. The pilot survived.

An AEC spokesman said it appeared the plane, flying at 50 or 60 feet above the water, hit a down draft in the 60-mile-an-hour winds whipping over the lake.

The park service said Thompson was along to observe the lake and surrounding area in connection with weapons testing at the Nevada nuclear test site about 75 miles away.

Book Looks at 4-Day Week Theory

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — "Four, forty and leisure."

This is the slogan of the four-day, 40-hour week that experiments show may have enormous impact on American society. It also is the subject of . days, 40 hours, a new book that is evoking an unexpected tide of comment from all over the United States. It suggests that a revolution in work hours already is under way.

Among the advantages to management of working fewer days but longer hours, as found in studies of companies that have implemented such plans:

Happier work environment, greater production, less waste in production, less turnover of help, easier recruitment of workers, less absenteeism and tardiness.

And for employees:

More leisure time, better family life, lower commuting costs, avoidance of rush hours, more time for personal appointments, the opportunity to work at a second job.

There are disadvantages, to be sure, but this pioneer study of the phenomenon turns up relatively few, and almost any reader is likely to conclude that the shorter week — if not shorter hours — is catching on.

Shorter hours, however, may also result from the shorter week. That is, unions like the idea of four days but tend to feel that the 10-hour day is a step backward. They're more inclined to the four-day, 32-hour week.

Pollution Legislation 'Coming'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Evan Wolfe, Social Credit MLA for Vancouver Centre, says he expects the government to introduce legislation on health and hospital insurance, welfare and pollution at the 1971 session of the legislature.

He said Wednesday in an interview that some of the new legislation will have resulted from proposals aired at last week's two-day meeting of the Social Credit caucus, of which he is chairman.

Mr. Wolfe said there were "no holds barred" and MLAs were not hesitant to "let the ministers know what they think."

He said health and hospital insurance, rehabilitation and social improvement, and pollution were the "three particular areas of concern."

The ministers with the prime responsibility in these three areas all took active part in the discussions, he said.

Parity Wanted With U.S. Auto Workers

TORONTO (CP) — The barbed question of full parity with United States auto workers, including the U.S. cost-of-living escalation clauses, threw high barriers today between 23,000 striking Canadian auto men and General Motors of Canada Ltd.

The strike now is in its 11th week, the United Auto Workers' strike fund is due to run out at the end of the month, and Canadian strikers are critical of the UAW for settling in the U.S. before settlement in Canada. A lengthy prolongation of the strike here seemed possible.

And the answer from GM's chief negotiator in Canada to the demand for full parity is: "Hell, no!"

A. G. Stapleton, the negotiator, said Canadian auto workers are being unrealistic in seeking parity with U.S. workers on cost-of-living allowances.

"In a very real sense the union wants more than wage parity," he said Wednesday in a statement.

"What the union is demanding is that the wage increases be granted to Canadian workers based upon the much greater rise in the consumer prices and cost of living in the United States.

RECALLS 1967 PACT

But Dennis McDermott, Canadian UAW director and international vice-president, said that in 1967 when the Canadian cost of living allowance was higher than the U.S., GM insisted the union forgo an eight-cent-higher allowance as a price for the wage parity agreement.

"What was good enough for GM in 1967 is fine by the UAW in 1970," said Mr. McDermott.

The parity demand was endorsed unanimously Wednesday at a mass meeting of auto workers in nearby Oshawa. The fight is over approximately 21 cents an hour.

The UAW's negotiating team at GM Canada sent a telegram to UAW president Leonard Woodcock requesting him to join the bargaining committee with his aides when talks resume Sunday.

The union negotiating committee took its account of the issues to strikers at GM's Frigidaire division in Toronto Wednesday night. Membership meetings are being held in St. Catharines and London today and in Windsor Friday.

"Our people are perturbed," said Steve Nimigon, UAW plant chairman at Oshawa. "Christmas is approaching. They want to get back to work as quickly as possible. But they won't go back unless they get full parity."

Workers Want More French

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa said Wednesday night that the Quebec government will take "all necessary steps" to establish the use of French firmly at the General Motors plant in Ste. Therese, Que.

He said the government may intervene in the GM dispute by forcing the company to accept the workers' demand for greater use of French.

Showing signs of impatience with GM, Mr. Bourassa said the company has erroneously considered Quebec as part of its domestic English-speaking market in North America.

"It is time to realize Quebec is not part of the English market. Quebec is French and culturally distinct from the rest of North America." General Motors must prove it is truly a multi-national company "by adapting itself to the milieu where it establishes itself," Mr. Bourassa said.

The 2,400 workers at the Ste. Therese plant, located 20 miles northwest of Montreal, have been on strike since Sept. 15.

MOST SPEAK FRENCH

Ninety-five per cent of the plant workers are French-speaking. The union wants all foremen to be able to converse with a unilingual worker.

A company spokesman said "16 or 17" of the plant's 110 foremen cannot speak French. Only 24 per cent of the foremen could speak French five years ago.

Mr. Bourassa said he is determined to carry his French priority program through to the bitter end.

So far the government has used a peaceful "urging" policy but he warned "other alternatives" will be explored if there is no settlement.

He would not elaborate other than to say he is awaiting recommendations from the Gendron Commission, which is inquiring into the use of French in the province, on how to promote greater use of French in Quebec industry.

"Quebec will not permit a situation where French Quebecers cannot work in their own language."

Mr. Bourassa told the national assembly Wednesday that he has asked Jean Cournoyer, newly-appointed labor minister, to act as a go-between in the conflict with GM management and the workers.

The gift you never stop opening.

AMALGAMATION ILL FEELING BOILS OVER

Chamber Has 'No Damn Business'—Mayor

By DONNA CLEMENTS

DUNCAN — The ill feeling over amalgamation between Cowichan Valley's two mayors and the president of the Duncan-North Cowichan Chamber of Commerce boiled over Wednesday.

Following a scathing attack by President Les Atchison on Mayor Jim Quaife of Duncan and Mayor Gerry Smith of North Cowichan at a Chamber meeting Wednesday, Smith angrily told Chamber members they have "no damn business" instigating an amalgamation motion to the city and his council.

Smith said that it is up to ratepayers' associations to approach councils with the request for a public opinion poll on amalgamation with the Dec. 12 elections.

Atchison has approached both councils and three North Cowichan ratepayers' groups with the request and has repeatedly been told to wait for the results of a joint services study.

The $9,200 study, which was made public Wednesday, advised councils that amalgamation should not be considered until 1973.

In his speech, Atchison attacked both mayors for their stand on amalgamation.

"Compated to the indiscretions of two of the city's representatives, the mayor of North Cowichan is an angel," he said.

"I am fed up with the tokenism that follows the mayor of Duncan about."

Atchison said Quaife is looking for a boundary extension of Duncan, to enlarge his empire, either north or south. "I am unalterably opposed to any attempt to partially annex the municipality of North Cowichan by the city of Duncan and hope any attempts would be defeated by the municipal affairs department and the residents of this valley."

Duncan Alderman Allan Kerr also came under attack by Atchison.

"Let us look at his performance in the past 10 weeks and see if we call follow him through the fog in which he surrounds his thoughts — a smoke screen I think one city alderman called it."

Atchison criticized Kerr for rushing a similar motion on amalgamation by Ald. Dick Benzies into committee and then presenting a motion that the city of Duncan extends its boundaries.

"When he was reminded that his council was on record as unanimously renouncing any efforts to absorb areas to the south until petitions by those ratepayers, Ald. Kerr didn't know what to say."

From a local paper Atchison quoted Smith as an alderman in 1969 as saying: "I will work for the amalgamation of North Cowichan and the city of Duncan . . . all this duplication of services is a bad thing and costs the taxpayer nothing but money."

He then presented a quote the mayor made last month: "We have five ratepayers groups within the municipality. These associations have made no request, nor has such a petition been received from municipality residents. Until such action is taken by these groups requesting that a vote be taken, this matter should not be submitted to the elections."

ATCHISON
... scathing attack

Several Chamber members expressed opposition to the president's statements.

Norm Goulay stressed tsat Atchison's speech was not representative of the mebers while Jim Lambeth said, "I was personally shocked to be confronted with this speech today."

After the meeting Mayor Jim Quaife accused Atchison of overstepping his bounds of office.

"I would qualify that statment by saying Mr. Atchison is playing politics with Chamber members and that his statements today are entirely out of order and a cause for embarrassment for Chamber members. This action, certainly, in my estimation, would require a public apology to Chamber members."

Quaife said he didn't think the Chamber should become embroiled in politics nor is it the president's right to speak out and criticize local elected officials without having a true basis for criticism and full support of the chamber "which he has not got."

"Statements made by Atchison as regards to myself are strictly hearsay," he said.

The results of the joint services study spurred other reactions besides Atchison's prepared speech.

Quaife said it didn't reveal anything they didn't already know, Smith praised the study as "a good job," and Benzies said the consultant firm led the councils down the garden path.

When plans for the study was instigated at a joint council meeting, "we wanted all facts and figures pertaining to services and recommendations on joining together based on fact," Benzies told chamber mebers.

"I would suggest that the company that did this work did not do what they were asked and have arrived at conclusions without establishing any fact."

Benzies said the councils have wasted their money and "I suggest to you that any one of us sitting here in public office could come up with the same conclusions and decisions and they would be just as valid."

ABUSING PIGS DRAWS FINE

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — A Cobble Hill man in his late forties was charged here Wednesday with ill treating pigs.

Sigmund Czempisz received a $25 fine and three months suspended sentence after court was told that out of the nine pigs on his farm one was found dead and two were in such a condition they had to be destroyed immediately.

Ambulance Bid Stalls

DUNCAN — The Duncan Ambulance Society says it is making no progress in getting a fee increase from local councils to carry on its ambulance service to the Cowichan Valley.

"We have endeavored to obtain financial assistance from local councils which are in receipt of per-capita tax funds from the provincial government to assist with ambulance services with no apparent success," a society statement said Tuesday.

The Cowichan Valley regional district has proposed an increase from $10 to $15, plus 50 cents a mile, for taxpayers in the ambulance area.

Skagit—A Landmark in Environmental Fights to Come

By BRUCE YEMEN
(An Analysis)

If it produces no other results, the continuing political controversy over proposed flooding of the Skagit Valley can claim one distinction.

It produced the absolute high-water mark of recent political debate in the form of the following statement by B.C. Liberal Leader Pat McGeer:

"Premier Bennett has tried to make himself appear helpless in the situation, a man with his hands tied.

"He should be tied to a tree in the Skagit Valley and then you would see whether the provincial government could find a means to stop the flooding."

That remark, delivered in a speech a couple of months ago and subsequently issued in press release form, probably tells as much about the high emotional content of the Skagit debate as it does about McGeer's occasionally mind-bending rhetoric.

Emotions Run High

But the Skagit controversy will probably produce a number of other results. One of them might even be a stop to the proposed flooding.

Tied to a tree, floating on a log or warm and cosy in his Victoria office, Bennett understands the high pitch of public concern about the Skagit.

B.C. signed a deal in 1967 with the city of Seattle to allow flooding of more than 5,000 acres of the valley bottom, 80 miles east of Vancouver at the U.S. border.

But now the province is saying that if Ottawa can stop the deal, which was made to provide Seattle with peak power electricity from the existing Ross Lake dam on the Skagit in the U.S., then British Columbia will go along with it.

Ottawa Signed Pact in 1942

British Columbia feels it can pass the responsibility to Ottawa by pointing out that the federal government signed the 1942 international agreement allowing for the eventual flooding of the valley.

The B.C. legislature ratified the deal, in effect, in 1947 and the Social Credit government finally struck a dollars and cents agreement with the Americans in 1967.

Since them, critics have pointed out that the provincial government could have simply refused to sign an agreement indefinitely, thus preventing the flooding.

There are those who say the land shouldn't be flooded at any price, but the view that the B.C. government asked too low a price is supported by many people.

Donald Waterfield, author of the book "Continental Waterboy" on the Columbia River power development, suggests it's a mediocre deal for both B.C. and Seattle.

He works the compensation out to the equivalent of $110 an acre for the use of the land for the 99-year agreement period.

The actual compensation is $34,566.21 a year in U.S. funds for 99 years, of $3.5 millin in either money or electric power if the B.C. government chooses at a later date.

Sell Seattle Needed Power

Waterfield says:

"Altogether apart from sentimental and ecological considerations and discounting entirely the irritation to patriotic sensibilities implicit in the sale of part of one's country, selling good land to another government for $110 an acre is utterly improvident."

Waterfield suggests a possible way out of the deal would be for B.C. Hydro to sell Seattle the needed peaking power at the $2 million annual cost estimated for the extra power from the Skagit flooding project.

"The amount of electrical energy involved is small, relative to B.C. Hydro's rapidly-expanding generation," Waterfield says.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who has so far shown little inclination to get excited about the issue is reported to have told B.C. Liberals last weekend that the way to stop the Skagit deal is to get rid of Premier Bennett.

Bennett, Trudeau is quoted as saying, could find a way to stop the flooding if he really wanted to. The Trudeau quotes come via Dave Brousson, Liberal MLA for North Vancouver-Capilano, an engineer who is perhaps the most enthusiastic anti-flood campaigner of them all.

Pin Hopes On Davis

B.C. Liberal hopes for federal action — it isn't clear, by the way, whether Ottawa can do anything to upset the deal — seem to be pinned on Jack Davis, soon to be put in charge of federal environmental management.

Ray Williston, B.C.'s minister of water resources, says the province can't ask the federal government to act as its agent in a campaign to stop the flooding because B.C. might then be held liable for about $8.5 million in work already done by Seattle in preparation for raising the water levels.

Williston is one of those who feels the Skagit Valley, properly cleared and prepared, would be of more recreational value to B.C. with the valley flooded than in its present partially flooded form (a few hundred acres) in which unsightly stumps are visible for part of the year.

The press, radio and television have taken an increasingly active interest in the Skagit controversy, with one notable entry into the debate being that of Paddy Sherman, the mountain-climbing editor of the Vancouver Province, in a column last month.

Sherman scoffed at McGeer's statement that the Skagit issue is "an environmental showdown for North America" and expressed concern that Liberal Senator John Nichol had devalued "the language of protest" when he used the term "criminal negligence" in connection with the valley's scheduled fate.

The "valid base of environmental concern" is in danger, of being undermined by "hysterical" voices, Sherman wrote.

Sherman said the part of the valley now being fought over was ruined as wilderness by logging 15 years ago.

He was later joined by Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum who attacked emotionalism and charged that many of the campaigners had apparently never seen the Skagit Valley.

In the midst of all this, Seattle hired a Vancouver public relations firm to publicize an engineering report outlinging the recreational values to be gained in the flooding project.

The battle for public opion continues, with the ironic result that government equivocating and buck-passing is actually encouraging evidence that public opinion is having an impact.

If, as some legal experts suggest, the matter is entirely in the hands of U.S. authorities, the Canadian struggle may simply have healthy benefits in preventing future Skagits.

But the date when flooding could start is a few years off, and the battle won't end if the U.S. federal power commission gives Seattle the go-ahead it needs.

Valley Ruined 15 Years Ago

Skagit appears to have the potential to be a North American issue with implications far broader than simply displacement or destruction of some wildlife and provision of recreation for the lower mainland.

It may not prove to be the environmental showdown that McGeer foresees — there will be hundreds of such showdowns, no doubt — but it could become a landmark demonstration of how quickly the social and political climate can change with public awareness of particular issues.

When Ray Williston signed the Skagit Valley agreement in January 1967, he might have felt justly proud of himself for securing a far better financial deal with the Americans than was first anticipated.

Hundreds Of Shutdowns

As Williston candidly admits, the word "ecology" is a relatively recent addition to his vocabulary and those of most other Canadians.

Times have changed not only since 1942 when the deal was first made possible, but they have changed dramatically since January, 1967, when B.C. put a price on the land involved.

Three years later, the uproar over the Skagit seems natural, unavoidable, necessary and healthy.

Contrary to the fears of those who would protect us from emotionalism in public debates, the language of environmental concern appears to be safe from destruction by those who let their feelings loose on the Skagit issue, including even Pat McGeer.

Bumper Holly Crop

A bumper holly crop this year is expected to bring $250,000 to Vancouver Island growers.

Ronald Nutter, 1565 Mount Douglas Cross Road, president of the B.C. Holly Society and one of the biggest growers in Canada, said production will likely be up one third over last year.

Holly picking will start early next month.

Leslie Foxall, of Koksilah, president of the Vancouver Island Holly Growers' Co-operative Association, confirmed that the plants are heavily-berried and production will be high.

The 20 active members of his holly co-operative sold only 15,000 pounds last year because of the severe winter in 1968, he said.

The co-operative was formed in the late 1940s to faciliate the marketing of holly. The society was established in 1968 to help growers with problems and improve the crop.

The red-berried foliage is mainly sold in Quebec and Ontario, although some is shipped to Newfoundland and Nova Scotia.

Bennett Presents $10,500 Donation To Art Gallery

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It was "Happy Opening" at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Wednesday evening, when Premier W. A. C. Bennett climaxed his brief formal address by presenting gallery president Geoffrey Greenhalgh with a $10,500 cheque.

Close to 1,000 of the gallery's total 2,000 membership thronged the rooms and a gasp of delighted surprise and a burst of applause greeted the announcement.

The Premier, who had just declared the new $120,000 wing open, said that the gift came from one of British Columbia's "perpetual funds."

The new wing comprises the Kenneth C. Drury Memorial Gallery and the Founders' Gallery. In his remarks the Premier paid tribute to Kenneth Drury, former Victoria Times editor, who had donated one of the new rooms in memory of a sister and two brothers, Nora Charlotte Drury, Eric William Drury and Dr. Douglas Richard Drury.

Donations of many gallery members and major gifts from 10 founding donors were noted by the Premier in connection with the second room.

The founding donors are Princess Jennie Chikhmatoff, Mrs. J. W. Benning, Mrs. Massy Goolden, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. B. Ker, Mrs. Charles J. Martin, Mrs. W. F. Pinfold, Mrs. Will Spencer, Lady Stuart Taylor and H. A. Wallace.

Comment by the Premier on the "almost unbelievable contrast" of the now spacious and beautifully equipped gallery, with the downtown store in which founders mounted their first exhibitions 25 years ago, found an echo in the minds of many original members who were present, including Miss Sara Spencer whose gift of her family mansion on Moss Street was the start of the present handsome complex.

Following the opening Premier Bennett, Deputy Provincial Secretary Lawrie Wallace and other officials toured the rooms which, for the opening week, will show a representative selection from the institution's 3,000-object collection.

Theme of the display is Arts of Nine Civilizations. Featured are arts and crafts of Europe from the 16th century on, Persia from the 10th to the 16th centuries, 19th century Tibetan art, 1,500-year-old sculpture from India, Japanese painting and crafts from the 5th to the 20th century, 1,000 years of Chinese art, early Mexican pottery and Canadian and American art.

More than 80 of the works of art on view are new acquisitions being given their first showing. One complete gallery is devoted to the recent Elizabeth Marshall bequest of Canadian art and a special alcove has been created for changing displays of the work of Emily Carr.

The new wing has specialized art storage vaults below where different degrees of humidity are set according to the needs of each kind of object.

Ultramodern burglar alarms and fire detection systems make the galleries second to none in Canada.

Among those present, Wednesday, were Mrs. Isabel Pollard of San Francisco and Bunzo Nakanishi of Kyoto, Japan, both of whom have contributed generously to the gallery's permanent collection.

Both had come to the city specially for the opening of the new wing.

Today, Friday and Saturday the Art Gallery is holding an open house for the public. Hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

His Dinner Jackets Can Travel

NEW YORK — Despite all the publicity about casual fashion trends, Ben Gingiss manages to do very nicely with a national chain of stores devoted entirely to men's formal wear. He even has an exclusive collection made just for his stores so that he can carry the latest ideas.

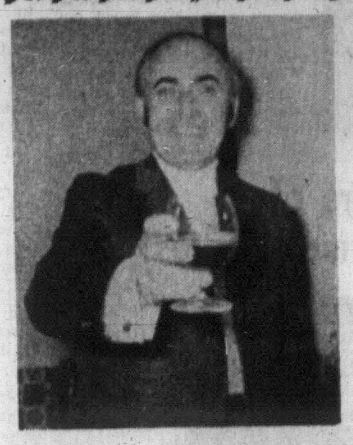

Naturally, a great deal of his business is rental, about 75%, and as travel increased, this started him thinking about the effect on his business. With about 15 of rentals going to people attending social functions and convention banquets away from home, how could you accomodate the traveler from Chicago whose convention was to be in Miami?

The result was a new idea, sort of a dinner jacket Hertz. You get fitted where you live, pick up the rented suit where you go, and also leave it there. Saves packing, pressing and the difficulty of renting after arrival in the twon of destination.

As Mr. Gingiss has 18 company-owned stores and 22 franchised stores, he can mount such an idea between a large number of locations. He notes that wearing a dinner jacket is actually rising, not decreasing, because many more men now find they need one for perhaps three occasions a year, not merely an infrequent wedding.

"Even the young still account for 15% of rental business," says Mr. Gingiss, who doesn't mind in the least referring to formal wear as "the tuxedo," although he knows that is an obsolete word. "Proms haven't changed. The kids want to dress up."

Eggheads in Rebellion

NEW YORK (UPI) — Take four super-educated females and ask them to set you straight about the women's liberation movement.

The first topic that comes into the discussion is men, in this consensus:

Males don't have all the answers. And because they don't, society has gone off the track.

One of the first goals of the women's movement must be to educate women to overcome the subconscious attitude that men are necessarily superior.

Men of superior performance have nothing to fear from the women's liberation movement. They will not be affected in any way. But men of inferior performance are going to go down the drain if merit really becomes the basis for climbing the ladder for both sexes.

The women from the fields of education, law and psychology did their talking during a seminar taped for television presentation under the title Women's Lib: From What? For What? The Young Women's Christian Association of the city of New York helped produce the seminar in co-operation with the public affairs program of New York's WOR-TV. The seminar is one of the activities of the YWCA of New York City in honor of its 100th anniversary.

The eggheads who got together included Charlotte Bunch-Weeks, visiting fellow, Institute for Policy Studies, Washington, D.C.; D. Pauli Murray, professor of American civilization, Brandeis University, one of the founders of the National Organization for Women (NOW) and former consultant to the equal employment opportunity commission; Helen Southard, psychologist, director of the national YWCA resources centre on women, and Jacqueline Wexler, president of Hunter College of the City University of New York.

A review of the transcript of the seminar shows that the experts see a need for women to be educated in their present and future roles. Mrs. Southard, for example, would like to see women get over the unconscious "desire" of many women to view men as their superiors.

Mrs. Wexler, formerly a nun and president of St. Mary's College in South Bend, Ind., said that the liberation movement, to increase numbers of women willing to join, must sharpen its sell.

"Ultimate emphasis," she said, "must be placed on the great range of possibilities available in the term liberation.

"Many women have been turned off because of the preoccupation with militant factions in the media."

Mrs. Bunch-Weeks, an active member of the National Women's Liberation Movement, said the movement's goals at this point must be:

"To work toward evolving and unifying women's power, redefining family roles, revamping the image of women and increasing women's economic and political power."

Mrs. Wexler called for something more, saying:

"If women could be in the forefront on domestic issues, on questions of the aging, dignity, equal employment and education for every citizen over a long period of time, it would be far more than women's activism. It would be human activism designed to improve the human condition."

The other panelists didn't disagree with her, so you might say that the real goal of women's liberation is "to improve the human condition."

—CP Photo.

EARLIER THIS YEAR these women and hundreds of others like them gathered on Parliament Hill to demonstrate in favor of abortions on demand. Such militant demonstrations on controversial stands have turned many moderates away from the liberation movement.

Have Canadian Women Missed the Revolution?

SASKATOON (CP) — The possibility that the women's liberation movement in Canada might be narrow-minded was raised by two spokesmen for the organization during the weekend.

Marlene Dixon of Montreal and Peggy Morton of Toronto were addressing 200 delegates to the movement's first national conference.

Miss Dixon said many members of the movement are not interested in protesting injustice unless it affects them directly.

"Not all women are our sisters," she said. "I can't be a part of this any more. We must become opposed to all forms of exploitation. Women are the most exploited."

She called on movement members to revolt against a system she said is based on the dollar.

"That which you desire for yourself, you take. When you are truly struggling for liberation then you'll reach the reality that the best servant of the people is the person that is a revolutionary."

In Middle Life Age Becomes Unimportant

LOS ANGELES — He, an architect, is 30 years old; she, a teacher, is 45. And because of the age difference, their first six months of marriage supplied a few unpleasant incidents, although they were not as unsettling as you might expect.

They are a handsome couple with a cushion of sophistication that allowed them to take it in stride when a waitress commented on how nice it was for a man to take his mother to dinner.

His reaction was subdued when he saw the raised eyebrows of his co-workers as his bride, whose hair is stunningly shot with gray, picked him up for lunch shortly after they returned from their honeymoon.

The couple were brought together by a multitude of mutual interests — the theatre, travel, art — rather than mutual friends, or even a computer. They dated for several years before taking the big step.

Their marriage is an example of what seems to be a new trend here in marital mores — the older wife, the younger husband.

When it comes to talking about it, the topic remains sensitive, however, even among women in show business, where the trend may have started.

Among those in the entertainment field who will say no more than that they are happily married to their younger husbands are: Audrey Hepburn, Mary Pickford, Norma Shearer, Leslie Caron and Sybil Burton (Now Mrs. Jordan Christopher, formerly Mrs. Richard Burton).

But those who ski, dine and swim with these women and their younger husbands bring back glowing reports of connubial bliss.

A couple of years ago a Los Angeles psychologist, Dr. Loriene Chase, devoted a major portion of her professional time to television shows. She found considerable interest in the older wife-younger husband subject. "I did over 350 shows at that time," she recalled, "and found such heavy public response to the subject that we really did a disproportionate number of programs on this theme.

"We are not mature enough to realize that a woman at middle life may be at her peak; she may not have been there or anywhere near there in her 20s. She may at that point (her peak) find that she relates best to whatever human being is at that level also. Age becomes completely unimportant."

Dr. Chase said it amused her to see the difficulty some people had in understanding how a woman could marry a younger man. "The outsider doesn't realize that they fit each other's needs," she said. And it bothers her to hear talk about the inability of some older women to bear children as if it were a bar to these marriages.

"There are all kinds of children around available for adoption if the desire for children is so great," she said.

"As far as sexuality goes, until now there has been the generally accepted fact that man's sexuality is practically eternal. But now we know that a woman has an even greater capacity.

Dr. Edward Stainbrook, chief of the Department of Human Behavior at the University of Southern California, and a practicing psychiatrist, said these marriages were victims of a double standard.

He was referring to the ready acceptance of marriages of men to considerably younger women.

Why hasn't the reverse been equally acceptable?

"I think this is because the mother is the nurturing figure where the father is not," he said. "That is why many view this as a prohibition to sex and affection between older women and younger men. There is an incest taboo on both sides in some cases."

"It is almost as though she couldn't get another man," Stainbrook said, "as though she were backing away from mature hetrosexual involvement, i.e., that she is not seeking a man to love as a husband but rather is looking for a son kind of relationship."

Stainbrook said he considered age an artificial way to categorize people and that he was optimistic at the possibilities for happiness in an older-woman marriage.

"Our society is turning people free to be individuals," he said. "I am sure you will find some of the old restrictions will disappear. We are free to be human beings; free to see the world as we want to see it. There are no absolutes any more."

DEAR ABBY . . .

End Exchange

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Can you tell me how to go about putting a stop to exchanging Christmas gifts with people we hardly ever see? I don't mean relatives. I mean out-of-towners who used to be neighbors, and who had children who were friendly with our children (all grown now) and folks we are no longer close to.

Shopping, wrapping and mailing Christmas presents has gotten to be a real chore, and I am not as young as I used to be. I would just as soon get off a lot of people's lists and take them off mine, and if the truth were known, I'm sure they feel the same way about it, but don't know how to get off mine. So how do I get off this merry-go-round, Abby? I would just as soon send Christmas cards to a couple of dozen people who are still on my Christmas gift list. — CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

DEAR CHICAGO: Writ a nice note to those folks you'd like to take off the "gift list" and put on the "card list"—and tell them you are "thankful" for friends with whom you can be perfectly frank. Tell them that this year along with trimming your Christmas tree you are trimming your "gift" list and are sending cards instead. And unless they are dense and insensitive they'll appreciate your sensible and practical attitude and will reciprocate accordingly.

DEAR ABBY: My father chews tobacco and makes it a habit to spit in the kitchen sink where I wash the dishes. I know it's not sanitary and sometimes I fuss at him and tell him so. Then my mother gets mad at me and blesses me out. Is there some help for my problem? — Only a Child.

DEAR ONLY: Even though your father needs to be told, it's extremely difficult for a child to tell him. You don't say how old you are, but if he continues that disgusting habit much longer, save up for a spittoon to wash the dishes in.

DEAR ABBY: I work in an office with several men and women. Whenever a certain man in the office gets near me, my foot starts tapping. This doesn't happen with any of the other men. It is very embarrassing as I was not aware of this until this man asked my why I always tapped by foot whenever he gets near me. Even now, being aware of it, I find myself doing it, unconsciously.

This man is very good looking and has a charming manner, and all the girls in the office light up when they see him coming, but I am the only one who does any tapping. What is the matter with me?—Toe Tapper.

DEAR TAPPER: "Toe-tapping" implies "impatience." What are you waiting for?

What Do Women Really Want?

Room at the Top Can Be Lonely for a Husband-Centred Wife

WASHINGTON (WP) — Can money bring a woman happiness?

Lois Wyse, author of a book, Mrs. Success, which asks this very question, has found that the answer is generally, "No."

With the help of a sociologist, she queried 40 middle-aged women whose husbands' names she got from newspaper fiancial pages, mostly coporation executives in the 100,000-dollar-a-year bracket, and found that most seemed dissatisfied with their lot.

The author came to conclude that this may be because they are not utilizing their own talents. But she reports that her subjects do not blame the lifestyle that has them devoting their time to clothes, cars, country clubs and charities.

They blame their husbands.

Mrs. Success is a College-educated woman, informed and attractive, who provides her husband with the sort of home he wanted during his rise in business, and who scrupulously adjusts their lifestyle upwards until it is — with the multiple residences, "name" schools for children, symphony volunteer work, sophisticated entertaining, travel and antique collections — perfectly in keeping with his position at the top.

Only now, this paragon wife had discovered that her husband has lost interest in her contribution.

Mrs. Wyse sympathizes with the women' claim that business affairs drain their husbands of emotional energy. The women wish their husbands would learn, through marriage counsellors and other therapists, to channel more energy into their family life.

However, she thinks part of the wives' dissatisfaction may be of their own making.

"These women bought a totally sexist theory of marriage, and it's not really working," she said. "They bought the idea that they should be subservient to a man, to his goals, to his ideas on everything."

Part of that idea was the feeling that a wife's support was necessary to business advancement. "Wives in the 1950s were looked at carefully, but by the 1960s, I don't think businesses looked at them any more. They found out that if a man is a good worker, it doesn't make any difference what his wife is like.

"Business success just doesn't depend on a wife — unless of course, her father is the boss."

Mrs. Wyse thinks it might help if these women were to "attempt to do something where they can be the sole performers, as their husbands are in business. It doesn't have to be a job, but could be painting or needle work." Mrs. Wyse finds, however, that talk of liberation is not taken well.

"They're opposed to it. They don't understand it, and they're afraid of it. It's frightening to have one's props knocked out from under one and, anyway, it's too late for them. But they could support their daughters, and their daughters want sanctions for their views. I tell them it's like donating a college dormitory: You can look at it, but you can't live in it."

Mrs. Wyse feels, that the daughters probably will face the same problems their mothers face — in spite of talk about liberation, nonmaterialism and social involvement. "I haven't noticed Harvard business school emptying out," she said, "and I would hate to feel that the best-educated and most intelligent people in our society were not going to run our businesses. You have to have a structure for improvement — the Ralph Naders of this world are few and far between. Let's see where these people who are in Vista now go when they're 30. They're going to want nice homes, and they'll care about the education of their children and there'll still be many who want to belong to the country club. They may spend money in different ways from their parents, but they'll spend money."

Part of her conviction comes from her own experience as a "Mrs. Success." She says she has found the satisfactions that are lacking among the subjects of her book.

Her husband is an advertising executive ("When I married him, he had not a cent, but he said to me, 'I'm going to be very rich.'") She says, "Some of my best friends are rich.") The big houses and country clubs are part of her life, too, but it is her writing, she says, that has made the difference. She has published several books of poems and children's stories, as well as working as "creative director" of her husband's firm.

"It was the books that mattered," she said. "Working for my husband is just an extension of the marriage, but the books — although you can read them all standing up — are all mine."

'Don't Give Up' Feminist Tells Older Women

MONTREAL (CP) — A feminist and former member of the Women's Liberation Movement contends that older women have just as much right as 20-year-olds to regard themselves as physically attractive and to seek sexual fulfilment.

Evelyn Hollander Hertz, 31, told a recent meeting of a University Women's Club here that people tend to regard young girls and future generations of women as the only beneficiaries of liberation movements.

As a result, older women were made to suffer, even though they too deserved to feel independent and equal.

"Keep trying new things," she urged, "new jobs, new activities, new husbands."

Mrs. Hertz said no one is shocked when a 48-year-old man marries a woman of 28 — "in fact, we say 'He has such a cute wife!"

But when the situation was reversed, there was gossip and criticism of the woman for not acting her age.

She said women are made to think that they age more quickly than men.

"But it's not true.

"As women you shouldn't give up because you're 25 or 35 or 45 or 55 or 65, and just because you can't touch your toes any more you don't even try.

"Don't give up, no matter how old you are."

Mrs. Hertz, a native of Yugoslavia, works in a feather importing firm which she expects to manage once her father retires.

Her husband, a writer, stays home.

She firmly believes that the late psychiatrist Sigmund Freud has done more damage to women than most of the chauvinists they denounce.

Freudian-oriented psychiatrists interpreted women's roles in terms of the male-dominated society. They rarely encourage women to fulfil themselves outside the home.

"Beware," said Mrs. Hertz, "of these explanations men make of how you should behave."

Mrs. Hertz said she resigned from the Montreal Women's Lib organization because it was Marxist.

"I think Marxism is a male ideology," she said, adding that Christian history has shown women are always neglected in the creation of new orders.

"As a good feminist, I don't want to have anything to do with a male ideology because I think we women can think up our own — we don't have to follow the men, even in revolution."

REPORT SOUGHT BEFORE DECISION

Region Studies Park Maintenance

The Capital Regional District board inched toward getting into maintenance and development of its parks Wednesday.

Although sparked by the condition of a concession building at Elk-Beaver Lake Park, debate quickly turned to the broader issue.

At present, the board cannot maintain and develop its parks, only acquire the land. The five-year acquisition program ends next year and so far 3,137 acres have been purchased.

The board at first faced a motion that it ask the cabinet to amend its letters patent to permit maintenance and development.

Then, with some cautious voices being heard, it was agreed to table this pending a technical report.

North Saanich Mayor J. B. Cumming said it is time for the board to consider maintenance and Central Saanich Mayor Archibald Galbraith said the stage is being reached when water and sanitary facilities are needed.

Saanich Ald. Leslie Passmore said the necessity exists and he mentioned the parks at Coles Bay, Witty's Lagoon and Island View Beach.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said maintenance would presumably have to come from acquisition funds although the larger amount would be for purchases. He said the board should make a decision on maintenance in the next two or three months.

Elk-Beaver Lake Park was different, he said, because basic maintenance is provided for by an agreement with Saanich which has seven years to run.

Sooke director Howard Elder said he is afraid "we might do something precipitous" and asked if two or three months delay would make much difference.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said she wants time to think about it.

Dealing with Elk-Beaver Lake Park and problems not covered under the basic maintenance agreement with Saanich, the board was told that special legislation allows the regional district to make improvements there.

It was agreed that the board spend $1,250 to bring piped water to the Beaver Lake concession and that the present building, under fire from health officials, gradually be phased out.

PARTY FOR DEAF

The party sponsored by the Beltone Hearing Service will start at 2 p.m.

Organizer Rudolph Hahn said any parent with a deaf child or with a hearing problem can register for the party.

Principals in Hospital Issue To Meet Monday on Land Deal

A top-level meeting of the principals in the long-standing St. Joseph's Hospital expansion issue will be held Monday.

North Saanich Mayor J. B. Cumming, deputy chairman of the Capital Region Hospital District board, announced the meeting Wednesday.

He said it will be the first time the regional hospital board has been able to meet directly with the Sisters of St. Ann, who own the hospital and adjacent property slated for expansion.

Also attending Monday's meeting will be Health Minister Ralph Loffmark and a representative of the medical staff at St. Joseph's.

Cumming said the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society, scheduled at one time to take over operation of the hospital from the sisters, will not attend "as such."

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said he is hopeful that by sitting down with the principals, rather than the representatives, everyone's feelings will be seen "to sort this unbelievable mess out."

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said she is sure the meeting will clarify "a great many misunderstandings."

The board received a copy of a letter from Loffmark to Sister Kathleen Moroney, provincial superior of the sisters, saying the "most desirable" arrangement is sale of all the lands for $1,587,280.

While the hospital could get by with a lesser amount of land "I would emphasize . . . that we would prefer to acquire the whole of the lands."

In another letter, Loffmark asked Sister Moroney to consider the desirability of sale of the entire lands "with a lease back to your order of that portion of the property which you would need for a period of time for educational purposes."

The regional hospital board also received a report which said that on any given day in the first week of November, 2,200 to 2,220 persons in the district were awaiting admission to local acute care hospitals.

Most were in the non-urgent category but at least 500 on the waiting list were not, the report said.

Private Schools Told To Deal With Ottawa

The education department Wednesday advised British Columbia's independent schools to try to deal directly with Ottawa to get some of the $50 million in special aid for French language teaching being made available this year.

Spokesmen for the Federation of Independent School Associations — representing 90 per cent of the province's private schools and their 21,000 students — said they were told the education department can't act on their behalf.

Dr. J. F. Waller, president of the federation, said the group will also seek help from the provincial attorney-general department "which is supposed to act on behalf of all the people of the province."

Waller said it appears the government overlooked the private schools in the question of the special aid and wondered aloud why the government won't show them a copy of the agreement with the federal government.

The group doesn't have a clear idea of how much money to seek under the federal aid program because it doesn't know how much has been allotted to B.C. The agreement was negotiated by the attorney-general department, he said.

Dr. Waller said a "high degree" of French is taught in independent schools.

Uvic Studies Special Loan Cards

The University of Victoria is considering special loan cards for non-university people who want to use the library facilities for research purposes.

While anyone in the community can use library facilities, only students, faculty members and university employees have borrowing privileges.

Under a plan approved by the senate last spring and which was to go before the board of governors this month, a person engaged in research could obtain a loan card good for the following four-month periods: September-December, January-April, and May-August.

The cards would cost $4 to cover service expenses, a library spokesman said. He defined "research" as "any serious scholarly purpose."

If governors approve the plan, it will come into affect in January. A similar plan is in operation at UBC.

NOVA SCOTIA MUST PRODUCE PLAN

Government May Save Plant

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Science Writer

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — The federal government's Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., may be used to bail out Nova Scotia's troubled heavy water plant at Glace Bay.

Energy Minister J. J. Greene said Wednesday this could be done if Nova Scotia's newly-elected Liberal government can produce a plan that will cost no more to bring the plant into production under federal aegis than to build a new installation.

Mr. Greene gave this news to Premier Gerald Regan at a conference earlier in the day attended by Lorne Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada; R. B. Cameron, chairman of the Cape Breton Development Corp.; Jack Austin, federal deputy energy minister, and Mr. Regan.

He said Mr. Regan, who earlier discussed the plant's troubles with Prime Minister Trudeau now will "present a plan whereby Atomic Energy could bring the plant into production."

Mr. Greene came here shortly after the meeting to open Eldorado Canada Ltd. uranium hexafluoride and zirconium facilities which are producing key elements for the Canadian and United States nuclear power programs.

MAJOR ROLE PLANNED

The Glace Bay plant was to have been a major factor in Canada's nuclear power program, producing heavy water for the atomic furnaces of Ontario Hydro, Hydro Quebec and overseas customers of the Canadian system of electric production from nuclear energy.

But that was in 1963 when it was the brainchild of New York financier Jerome Spevack who, as the first president of Deuterium of Canada Ltd., negotiated a deal to build the plant on a guarantee that the federal government would buy the heavy water.

The Nova Scotia government then headed by Robert Stanfield, now federal Conservative leader, committed $12 million to the project in return for 51 per cent of the company. The money was advanced through Industrial Estates Ltd., Nova Scotia's industrial promotion agency.

The plant was to have produced 400 tons of the costly substance yearly. It has yet to turn out a single drop of heavy water, nearly four years behind schedule. It was taken over completely by the province in 1966, on payment of another $3,000,000.

Mr. Spevack was replaced as Deuterium president by Mr. Cameron in October, 1968, after a rift with the company's directors.

The plant was beset by labor troubles over a crucial two-year period of construction.

Atomic Energy of Canada at about the time of the takeover doubled its commitments to buy Glace Bay heavy water—to 400 tons a year at an average price of $18.50 a pound. This price was later raised to $20.50 a pound and Mr. Greene has indicated that it may go up again to around $25.

Heavy water now sells on the open market for about $30 a pound. That is what Canada paid earlier this week to buy 55 tons from the Soviet Union to help tide over the power program during a shortage, due partly to failure of Glace Bay to come into production.

The plant was opened by Mr. Stanfield in May, 1967. By then, costs had risen to $83 million. So far the Nova Scotia government has sunk an estimated $106 million into the project.

Failure of the plant to get into production has been blamed on sea-water corroding the piping and equipment and failure of the final process in the production system being used.

Engineering studies a year ago indicated it would take another $30 million to put the plant into shape to produce. The figure now is considered to be nearer $40 million.

Mr. Greene said in an interview that if the plant could be made to produce for $40 million the federal government would be prepared to pay up to another $30 million to acquire it. He said it is estimated that it now would take $70 million to build a new heavy water plant.

Meanwhile, Canada's only major heavy water production is from the Canadian General Electric plant at Point Tupper, N.S., which turned out the first reactor-grade product last month and is scheduled to go 400 tons a year.

Atomic Energy of Canada is building an 800-ton-a-year plant at Douglas Point, Ont., which is expected to come into production in 1973.

Until then, the nuclear power program will feel the pinch for heavy water. The Russian purchase and an earlier one this year of 170 tons from Sweden helped out. So did purchase of 1,000 tons from the United States in 1969 for delivery over an extended period of time.

Heavy water, or deuterium oxide, is an essential ingredient of the Canadian system for producing electricity with nuclear reactors. It is used to moderate the nuclear reaction in the atomic furnace and, in some plants, to transfer heat to raise steam for electricity-producing turbines.

Even with the General Electric and Atomic Energy of Canada plants producing at capacity, more heavy water would be needed. Mr. Greene said those plants would be unaffected by a Glace Bay salvage operation.

Following his meeting with Mr. Greene, Premier Regan who led his Liberals to victory over the Nova Scotia Conservatives last month said he is "more hopeful than ever of getting the Glace Bay plant into production.

Stanfield's Mail Keeps Him Guessing

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — What is a poor politician to do?

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield has said the public clobbered him by mail for even his slightest reservation about the government's Oct. 16 proclamation of the War Measures Act.

But now, he says, he is getting some letters condemning him for supporting the principle of the public order bill, successor to war measures, and for allegedly not standing up for civil liberties.

His recent mail and that of many other MPs indicates a questioning of the use of the War Measures Act that was completely absent in the immediate wake of the assassination of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte by the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

This questioning does not appear widespread, but it is growing.

Government officials say some of it is being prompted by testimony at the Montreal coroner's inquest into Mr. Laporte's death, which tends to portray a catch-as-catch-can FLQ operation compounded by police mistakes.

These sources say the escape of three wanted men through a secret closet in an apartment, supposedly thoroughly searched by police and where one suspect was arrested, has given a "fun-and-games" aspect to the FLQ.

They add that this in turn has made it much more difficult for the government to maintain public credibility in its declaration that there was a state of "apprehended insurrection" in Quebec.

Jean Marchand, regional economic expansion minister, told the Commons that up to 3,000 armed FLQ members could destroy downtown Montreal and that positions of authority in the province had been infiltrated by the terrorist organization.

Justice Minister John Turner said it might never be possible to tell the whole story.

Mr. Stanfield for one now is questioning all these "October revolution" statements and has done so in his three most recent speeches outside the Commons.

"Canadians have been living in a sort of dream manufactured by rumor and misinformation," he said Saturday at Hagersville, Ont.

"A well-organized revolutionary situation was pictured as developing," he said three days earlier in Toronto.

"There was the famous story about the plot to overthrow the government of Quebec. These turned out to be just that—rumor, and nothing more. . . .

"There is no evidence of any massive, co-ordinated conspiracy.

"What is the FLQ? Is it actually an organization with central structures and leadership? Or does it consist of people who decide to call themselves FLQ simply in order to justify an act of terrorism?

"So far, we have no answer to that question."

EIGHT OF NINE FREED

At Hagersville, Mr. Stanfield said eight of every nine persons arrested under the War Measures Act have been released without being charged.

"Why has there been so little real evidence brought forward so far that such a conspiracy existed? Any why have so few people been caught and held?

"We aren't going to allow the Canadian people to be sweet-talked out of our right to information by a government that all too often has shown in the past that the two main qualities it possesses are arrogance and blind complacency."

Government authorities now say it appears that the FLQ has no hierarchy or intricate apparatus but comprises several independent cells working more or less on their own without over-all direction.

However, they add, that does not make the FLQ less dangerous—only harder to knock out.

Government spokesmen also say many of the statements made and actions taken early in the case were designed mainly to buy time in the police hunt for the kidnappers and, more particularly, for the two men abducted.

NEW LOWER PHOSPHATE

Breeze GETS THE BIG OK!

OK

says Mrs. A. McKinley of St. Lambert, Quebec.

We gave Mrs. McKinley an advanced pack of new lower phosphate Breeze, reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"With Breeze I've always been satisfied with my nice clean wash. I've tried the new lower phosphate Breeze and my clothes are just as clean as ever. And I always like to get the towel inside. Breeze is still my choice."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining Breeze's high quality performance.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

A storm from the Alaskan panhandle has spread snow to the north coast and the northwestern interior of B.C. Over an inch of fresh snow has already fallen at Terrace and Smithers. This storm will move rapidly down the coast spreading rain to most south coastal areas. However, a snow advisory has been issued for up to three inches of snow on the lower mainland with the system.

The Arctic air is expected to deepen over B.C. in the wake of the storm. This will result in clearing skies and colder temperatures.

Commandos Back in U.S.

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — The 102 Green Berets who had a hand in the U.S. commando raid into North Vietnam have come home for U.S. Thanksgiving.

A rush of wives and children greeted the men when they stepped from three C-123 transport planes Wednesday at Pope Air Force Base.

None would discuss the fruitless prisoner-of-war rescue mission carried out last weakend.

"We're going to do it again, maybe," said Lt.-Col. Thorne Marlow, a Pentagon information officer who accompanied the soldiers, "So we're not going to say anything."

The Berets, all stationed at Fort Bragg, in eastern North Carolina, had been gone since early August preparing for the raid on a North Vietnamese PoW camp about 23 miles west of Hanoi.

MURDER ACCUSED MARRIES WITNESS

HOUSTON (UPI) — The murder trial of Mrs. Lou H. Freeney—accused of shooting her husband—ended in acquittal when the judge learned the defendant had just married the state's star witness.

When the prosecution called Andrew Sims Jr., 39, to testify against Mrs. Freeney, 44, he explained that she was no longer Mrs Freeney but Mrs. Sims. They were married the previous day before a justice of the peace.

The judge ruled Sims, who took the stand as a witness to the barroom shooting, could not testify against his bride.

Breeze GETS THE BIG OK!

OK
says Mrs. A. McKinley of St. Lambert, Quebec.

We gave Mrs. McKinley an advanced pack of new lower phosphate Breeze, reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"With Breeze I've always been satisfied with my nice clean wash. I've tried the new lower phosphate Breeze and my clothes are just as clean as ever. And I always like to get the towel inside. Breeze is still my choice."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining Breeze's high quality performance.

HOME GARDEN

Time of Decision Has Arrived

By HILDA BEASTALL

The time of year has come when we must take a final realistic look at any summer flowering plants which may have survived the frosts of the past week. Until last weekend yellow marguerites, red geraniums, spray-chrysanthemums and a few fuchsias were still showing in many gardens.

Hilda

But now the decision must be made — whether to consign the plants to the compost heap with the sure knowledge of their fulfilling their final destiny of making new soil, or to try saving them.

Since they have been left in the garden this long, it is pretty safe to assume there's a lack of winter storage space for plants.

A coldframe would take care of the marguerite roots and the chrysanthemum roots. The marguerites really are Chrysanthemum frutescens, and both of these plants produce their best flowers when grown from cuttings rooted each year.

Young plants are offered for sale each year in April, and from these the home gardener grows sturdy bushy plants with dozens of blooms in summer and fall.

Each plant is good for only the one season of flowering, but cuttings from them will make new plants for the succeeding year.

In mild winters, the plants live over without a second thought from the gardener whose only complaint is likely to be that the plants are "leggy" and the flowers not so large the second year.

Geraniums of the zonal leaved kinds, with scarlet, salmon or white heads of flowers, have much the same life cycle.

Unless a cool, light and dry place is available for storing the old plants now finished blooming, it is best to take them up and discard them.

New plants grown from cuttings are for sale in spring and these rapidly make large bushy plants full of round flowering heads.

Fuchsias need a little less protection in winter than geraniums, for they are a more woody plant.

If their roots are protected from frost, and the bottom six inches or so of stem above soil level is shielded with compost, peatmoss or heaped-up leaves, you will likely have enough to start again next year.

However, young fuchsia plants, grown from cuttings make far more beautiful flowering plants than old plants not well cared for. As with marguerites, geraniums and chrysanthemums, the fuchsias also get woody with age and produce new growth less abundantly. It is new growth which bears the blooms.

So make the decision now — to keep or to buy new next spring.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Ever since the Italians started winning World Championships with their artificial systems of bidding (which, simultaneously, show point-count and distribution), many artificicial systems have come into being. Although most of them are quite difficult to master, they do reach optimum contracts which, in standard systems of bidding, would be just about impossible to reach.

As an example, observe the deal presented today.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♠ A 9 8 5
♡ A Q 7 4 3
◇ Q 6 2

WEST
♠ 6 3 2
♡ 9 8 5
◇ 10 5

EAST
♠ 10 4
♡ J 10 6 2
◇ 8 7 4 3

SOUTH
♠ K Q J 7
♡ K
◇ A K J 9
♣ 8 7 5 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2♡	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3◇	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5♡	Pass	6♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

By definition, North's opening bid of two hearts showed five hearts and four spades, within a hand that contained 12-16 high-card points. Thus South knew immediately that his partnership had an excellent trump suit in spades.

South's two no-trump response was a command to North for the latter to describe his minor suit distribution. North's three diamond bid announced that he possessed three diamonds. Since North was known to have four spades, five hearts, and three diamonds, it didn't require too much arithmetic to figure out that North had exactly one club.

The Blackwood Convention was now employed by South to check for for aces. When North announced that he had two of them, South contracted for the slam in spades.

The play presented no problem. West opened the ace of clubs, and then he shifted to a trump. South now drew three rounds of trumps, after which he cashed the king of hearts. He next ruffed a club with dummy's last trump, and on the ace and queen of hearts he discarded his two remaining clubs.

It is interesting to note that the lay-down slam was bid and made on only 29 high-card points. The key to the slam, from South's point of view, was the realization that North had just one club. And, hence, South did not have to worry about losing two quick club tricks.

As was stated, these artificial systems are difficult to master, and to bridge players who play the game "for fun," they are probably obnoxious. But there can be no question as to the efficiency of these systems when one observes the results they obtain in actual practice.

Strom: Combat Inflation by Moving People Around

By JIM NEAVES

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Harry Strom contends that to combat inflation the federal government should encourage the movement of people to areas of high opportunity from depressed areas.

He said in an interview with The Canadian Press that Ottawa, by trying to dampen the booming economies of Alberta, British Columbia and Ontario, has been choking development to the detriment of all Canada.

"What we really need is the transfer of people between areas of low opportunity and areas of high opportunity," Mr. Strom said.

Cutting off development within "the developing areas ... will have a downward pressure on the economy of the whole country."

So in trying to curb growth in "have" provinces, the have-nots were also being hurt.

Mr. Strom also called for the federal government to indicate quickly its position on resource development proposals in the white paper on tax reform. Additionally, he wanted a policy statement on foreign ownership in Canada.

ROOM FOR MORE

Both of these matters have a direct bearing on the amount of foreign capital which flows into Alberta, he said. Until there was a policy statement, exploration for oil and gas in Alberta would continue to decline.

Mr. Strom said there has been an improvement in federal-provincial relations since Prime Minister Trudeau took office—but there is room for more.

Confirming that feelings of Western alienation are fostered by discriminatory freight rates, Mr. Strom said the Prairie Economic Council will be doing more work as a Western bloc to combat discrimination.

The council, made up of the three Prairie premiers, also should work at industrial promotion and marketing on a regional basis instead of leaving them to individual provinces.

Switching to oil, the premier said spills are not a major issue in the province. There had been spills and there would be more. The important thing was to ensure that proper prevention and control methods were developed—something in the works now.

The Social Credit government was advocating multiple use for wilderness areas and while there might be some untouchable areas "I do not believe these will be large blocks."

DISTURBED BY QUEBEC

Premier Strom noted that 70 per cent of Canada's national parks acreage lies within Alberta's boundaries, which meant large areas already were untouchable for resource development.

The quiet, unassuming premier said Alberta was "very disturbed at the situation as reported to us" in Quebec.

The imposition of the War Measures Act had achieved its first goal, which was to give authorities power to question people without telegraphing to them their intent.

"Under the circumstances, I believe this was a necessary step ... and have fully supported the federal government in their action so far."

He also thought the people of Canada must trust the federal government, which had a great deal more information than was available to private citizens.

"I am not disturbed by the fact the War Measures Act has been imposed and I don't feel in any way my freedoms have been curtailed," he said.

The 56-year-old premier, who likes horseback riding and skiing but has little time for them, said politics no longer are something a man gets into after he's finished in private business.

"I do believe that because of the calls that are made on politicians today, it is becoming more and more a younger man's job. And of course, I hasten to add that at this point I do not consider myself an old man. I still consider myself a comparatively young man."

COULD BE ELECTION

Mr. Strom, who became leader of the Social Credit party when E. C. Manning retired in December, 1968, and who has never faced the Alberta electorate as leader, hinted there would be a general election next year.

"Traditionally, Albertans have voted every four years. And I haven't seen any reason to depart from that tradition."

The last general election was in May, 1967.

An edited version of the interview, held in the premier's office:

QUESTION: What is the state of Alberta's economy?

ANSWER: One of the bank's reports that I read recently states that the province of Alberta is the only province in Canada that does not have any soft spots in its economy. I am encouraged by that kind of report. I believe that we have some problem areas such as maintaining proper relationships between revenue and expenditure and this is something that we will continue to work at ... Generally speaking, Alberta's economy is one of the bright spots in Canada.

Q: Alberta is the only province without a retail sales tax. How long can this continue?

NOT AGAINST LABOR

A: I'm not speculating as to when it will be, but ... we have no intention of bringing in a sales tax until it is absolutely necessary.

STROM
... have-nots suffer

Q: There have been charges the Alberta government is anti-labor, particularly after introduction of the new Labor Act this year. What are your views?

A: We have never considered ourselves as a government as being against labor. Mr. (Ray) Reierson ... has done an excellent job of providing an atmosphere which has prevented Alberta from having a number of labor problems. ... We are not anti-labor and have no intention of promoting any legislation that will be cast as anti-labor. ... I have no hesitation saying that we believe labor is entitled to fair consideration from government and this is what we intend to give them.

Q: There has not been a major oil discovery in Alberta for more than five years and revenues from Crown leases are down. Does this mean the bloom is off Alberta's oil boom?

A: I don't say that it necessarily indicates there aren't further potential fields to be discovered. But it goes without saying that when $900 million is spent in another area that this curtails the amount of money that would be available here.

MOST STILL OPEN

And we can't overlook the fact there have been a number of statements made by various organizations that Alberta should be cutting off exploration in certain areas, and I think this also will contribute to some of the decrease. So I hope that we will be able to assure the people who are interested in looking for oil that there are still areas in which we would welcome exploration. In fact, I would suggest the greater part of the province is still open for exploration.

Q: Are you happy with results of your criticisms of the white paper on tax reform?

A: I believe we have been able to get the federal government to recognize some of the problems that will result if they were to proceed with the proposals ... particularly as it affects resource development within our province ... We are not totally happy with the results we've had to date because they have not really committed themselves.

Q: What comments do you have generally on federal-provincial relations?

A: I certainly can't spend all my time condemning the federal government and I must give them credit for trying to establish a means of dialogue. ... The prime minister has on a consistent basis attempted to bring the provinces together with the federal government to discuss areas of special concern.

I believe that we are being consulted to a much greater degree than we have in the past and I can honestly say that from the standpoint of the federal government attempts are being made to get the views of the provincial governments.

In order to make it more effective, we believe it is important for us to establish an inter-governmental agency that will act on behalf of our government in all negotiations that are carried out with the federal government.

SOME WON'T AGREE

Q: Is the need for an amending formula more urgent than the need for a rewritten constitution?

A: Several provinces are not going to agree to the rewritten constitution without knowing what the amending formula is. Our province is one of them. ... I do not think that we should strive to get a total package of amendments accepted at this time, but get a minimum number accepted by all provinces, determine the amending formula and get the constitution back to Canada where in fact it becomes our constitution that we can handle in any manner we wish.

Panther Pad Shoot-Out Scene

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A young woman who police said exchanged gunfire with them was shot today when officers stormed a barricaded apartment held by Black Panthers.

The raid on the apartment in the Desire Street Housing Project at 1:30 a.m. resulted in the arrest of five others who police said fired at them with automatic weapons and shotguns. None of the police was injured.

The raid came several hours after police arrested 25 others who had occupied the apartment several weeks and refused to heed a police order to evacuate. Police contended the militants were guilty of trespassing by occupying the apartment without paying rent in the huge, predominantly black project.

They were picked up after they left the apartment in autos rented by actress Jane Fonda.

All except the wounded woman were led to jail in handcuffs where they were booked with attempted murder of six police officers, aggravated battery and several lesser charges.

The 25 arrested Wednesday afternoon on a highway leading out of the city were in four cars rented by Miss Fonda who took part in a demonstration Tuesday "in support of the militants."

U.S. Camp Raid Triggers Recall Of Naval Rescue

The Americans failure last week to rescue prisoners-of-war triggered a flashback to a rescue 30 years ago, the success of which flashed around the world.

This was in 1940 when German warships and disguised merchantship raiders sank 463,530 tons of British, Allied and neutral shipping.

One of the most vicious of these was the German battleship Graf Spee, scuttled by her captain in the neutral port of Montivedeo after being mauled in battle by the British ships Exeter, Ajax and Achilles.

Before her end, the Graf Spee had accounted for more than her share of Allied shipping and 300 survivors from those sinkings were incaracerted in the bowels of her supply ship, the Altmark.

It was the rescue of these men that raised the moral of a war-weary world.

On Feb. 15, 1940, the Altmark was spotted as she entered the Inner Leads along the Norwegian coast, escorted by two Norwegian destroyers.

A flotilla of five British destroyers, commanded by Capt. P. Vian, RN, had orders to intercept the Altmark and rescue their buddies.

NONE FOUND

The Norwegians, insisting that the Altmark had been searched at Bergen and no prisoners found, shuffled her into Jossing Fjord out of range of the British.

Vian then received orders to offer to escort the Norwegians and the Altmark back to Bergen for a more thorough search.

If this offer was refused he was to board the Altmark.

At 10 p.m. Vian took the destroyer Cossack into the narrow fjord. The Norwegians were uncooperative — but passive. Vian laid his ship alongside the Altmark, who did her utmost to force the Cossack ashore.

RESISTANCE MET

Prince Charles' Favorite

LONDON (AP) — The 20-year-old daughter of Britain's defence minister is the current favorite date of Prince Charles, friends reported today.

Twice this week the 21-year-old heir to the throne has been on the town with blonde Bettina Lindsay, the daughter of Lord Balniel. Friends say they are putting on public view a friendship which has grown in private during the last few months.

Monday the prince took Bettina to London's Savoy Theatre to see a comedy, The Secretary Bird. The next night they were together again, this time at a concert at the Royal Albert Concert Hall.

A friend of Miss Lindsay said: "I get the impression that Prince Charles is very keen on her."

The prince apparently met Miss Lindsay six months ago during a party at Hatfield House, the home of Lord Salisbury. Since then she has stayed with the Royal Family at Balmoral, Queen Elizabeth's Scottish castle, and at Windsor Castle during Ascot race week.

Bettina spent much of last year in Paris studying at an acting school run by mime expert Jacques Lecoq. Now she has given up her theatrical ambitions and is at a London college, studying to be a teacher.

Billy Will Now Give Us Low-Down on the Italians

By A. H. WEILER

NEW YORK (NYT) — Now that Billy Wilder has revealed the shocking truth about the veddy British Sherlock Holmes, he is all set to give us the low-down on some assorted Italians.

The veteran director is currently collaborating with Julius J. Epstein on the screenplay of Samuel Taylor's "Avanti!" which had a brief run on Broadway in 1968.

Shooting is scheduled to begin for the Mirish Company and United Artists next May in Italy.

The comedy, about a young American and his beautiful British sweetheart who suffer a series of misadventures in Rome, will have only two major English-speaking roles.

"There'll be lots of Italian dialogue," says Wilder, "but we don't need English subtitles, since the action will speak for itself, I hope."

Isn't Wilder a bit reluctant to gamble on a property that failed to pull in Broadway patrons? "The picture will differ a lot from the play," he says.

"I hate to summarize plots because you always end up sounding pretty idotic in print, but it's planned as a romatic comedy on the order of 'Roman Holiday.' It won't be a nudie and it won't be a deep-dish problem play."

Well, how about a deep-dish nudie play?

Producer Anthony Havelock-Allan, who threw the spotlight on some of Ireland's historic "troubles" in "Ryan's Daughter," will next show us some famous French troubles.

He and a team of researchers are now gathering mountains of material in preparation for their film "Robespierre." He hopes to get Terence Rattigan to write the screenplay and to begin shooting some time next year.

"Robespierre was the apotheosis of the politically ambitious despot, the forerunner of Stalin," said Havelock-Allen. "Once again we are living in a time of intense ferment, and what better way to illustrate it than by examining a similar time in the past?"

SALUTE TO MUSIC WEEK

Proclamation of the current week — through Sunday — as Canada Music Week by acting Mayor Percy Frampton, echoed similar proclamations made by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and B.C. Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

A four-fold purpose is outlined in the proclamation.

To salute the music of Canadian composers; to recognize Canadian performers, from student to senior artist; to pay tribute to the music teachers, and to reflect on the joy music brings to the life of civilized man.

Several events in Victoria will acknowledge the tributes through one or two program items.

But a pair of concerts co-sponsored by the Registered Music Teachers' Association and Victoria Conservatory of Music, have been specifically arranged for the purpose.

The concerts take place Friday and Saturday at Newcombe Auditorium and will feature talented students of piano, strings and other instruments.

Music to be played includes a number of Canadian compositions.

Due to unavoidable circumstance, the composition by Victoria composer Rodney Webster, to be performed by Trio-Victoria, will not be included at this time.

There will be different programs on the two nights. They will begin at 8.

WELL-KNOWN in Victoria for his talents both as singer and comedian, Canadian baritone Jan Rubes will be heard and seen at the Royal Theatre Sunday and Monday. He sings the comic role of Pluto, God of the Underworld, in the joyous Offenbach opera, Orpheus in the Underworld. A charming spoof, filled with melody and laughter, based on Greek mythology, the action moves from a place near Orpheus' house in Thebes, to the not-so-hallowed halls of Olympus and thence to Pluto's apartment in Hades. The opera, fully staged with orchestra by the Canadian Opera Company, is being sponsored here by the Victoria Symphony Society. Performances begin at 3 and 8:30 p.m.

Varied Concert By Schools

A concert of a varied nature is to be presented Friday by the Oak Bay Schools Orchestra.

Directed by Bernard Rain, strings instructor in Oak Bay schools, the 30-piece orchestra representative of junior and senior secondary schools of the area, will perform in Oak Bay Junior Secondary auditorium.

The program will include traditional and popular numbers including selections from the movie, Doctor Zhivago, and music of Bach, Vivaldi and Sibelius.

Assisting will be the Campus View School Choir (formerly Shelbourne Elementary). As well as familiar songs, their contribution will include a special arrangement of nursery rhymes by Dr. Leslie Bell of Toronto.

Special guest soloist is the choir's conductor, Helmut Janzen, who is also director of the Saanich Oratorio Society. He will perform a song cycle by Beethoven and arias by Handel.

The concert, which begins at 8 p.m., will assist the orchestra in its current attempt to raise funds for a visit to Calgary in May and to commission an original composition for the 1971 Centennial.

Professor Derek Healey of the University of Victoria has already accepted this commission.

89 Years Of Paging, Grooming

GLENDALOUGH, Ireland (AP) — Andy McDonnell celebrated his 100th birthday this week and thinks he must be the world's oldest working hotel porter.

After 89 years of paging, grooming and portering, he has no plans to quit.

"A man must work to keep his mind occupied and his legs going," says Andy, who is still what his youngers call spry.

He is a porter in the same hotel where he was born in 1870, the Royal at Glendalough, a picturesque village where Dubliners like to weekend. He only left Glendalough after the death of his wife, when he went to live with his daughter in Dublin, 30 miles away.

Now she drives him back to the Royal every Sunday and on holidays so that he can don his hotel uniform and take his accustomed place in the front hall.

PARENTS WORKED THERE

Andy's mother was a housemaid and his father a porter in the hotel. When he was 11, he joined the staff as a page boy at two shillings sixpence —now 31 cents—a week. He was promoted to groom and finally became hall porter.

The Royal threw a party for his 100th birthday. Said Manager John Casey: "We started very early so that Andy wouldn't get too tired. But he was the last to leave—in the early hours of the morning."

Andy gave up drinking and smoking at 75 "because it was getting bad for me."

But it was only 10 years ago that he gave up working a seven-day week, 6:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m., all through the season, and with never a day off in 79 years.

Salesman Wins Suit

PITTSBURGH (AP) — William Brown, 41, had been his company's top insurance salesman and rose to division sales manager in 1965, but suddenly was fired. He sued. Wednesday, a federal court jury awarded Brown $85,000 to compensate him for back wages and slander. The judgment was against the Investors Diversified Services, and its subsidiary, Investors Syndicate Life Insurance and Annuity Co., Minneapolis.

Escape Attempts Kill Chinese

By GUY SEARLS
London Observer

HONG KONG — Almost 50 young Chinese have drowned in the past 20 days trying to escape from the mainland to this British colony.

Hong Kong police have picked up some 300 freedom swimmers who successfully swam the four miles, some after being in the water 14 hours. It is likely that many more have entered Hong Kong without being detected and even more likely that only a few of the bodies of those who drowned have washed into Hong Kong waters.

The first body was washed ashore on Oct. 27. The number of bodies totalled five at the end of October and 42 were picked up in the first two weeks of November. In addition, at least two bodies have floated into the harbor of the neighboring Portuguese colony of Macao.

The freedom swimmers are mostly young people born and bred since the Communist administration took power in China. Their desperate defections are fracturing the long-nurtured belief that people receiving indoctrination from infancy to adulthood are no longer capable of thinking for themselves.

ALL STUDENTS

This independence in thinking was possibly encouraged during the unrestrained period of the cultural revolution and its Red Guard adventures. The freedom swimmers have all been students and they have been ordered to go down to the countryside to learn from the peasants rather than continuing with their independent thinking on how to take advantage of the situation and get out. The fact that Chairman Mao had ordered all students to learn how to swim gave the students the physical training needed.

The land borders have been heavily patrolled since the great 1962 exodus from China and now the shore patrols are being reinforced as well. This means that escapers have to elude the patrols on land to reach the sea and then elude the patrol boats. The solution is to pick a good dark night and, for added safety, to take along something extra for buoyancy such as a life ring, inflated basketball or inflated plastic or rubber floats. Successful escapers say these are all in short supply now as the government has taken them off the market in the areas near Hong Kong.

POLICE ALERT

Although freedom swimmers have approached Hong Kong from both east and west, the western approach is most popular. Unfortunately this approach cuts across an area known as Deep Bay, a name which is misleading. The bay is not all deep but is spotted with shallow oyster beds. Swimmers crossing these beds have been badly cut by shells and sometimes their buoyancy aids have been punctured. Also, because of constant disputes between oyster fishermen from China and Hong Kong, the police from both sides always keep patrol boats nearby.

Until recently all illegal entrants to Hong Kong were turned over to the Chinese side immediately if caught early. Hong Kong police and immigration officials are now more sympathetic, usually doing everything possible to help the escapers to locate relatives or friends in the colony. Reports from China in recent days indicate that Communist border patrols have orders to shoot if there is no other way to halt defectors. Those caught face up to 10 years' labor reform.

TRAGIC CASE

Villagers living on the Hong Kong shore of Deep Bay say they often hear screams for help from freedom swimmers early in the morning.

The most moving and tragic escape involved a couple who hoped to get married once they arrived here. They had abandoned the commune where they were assigned and walked nearly nine days to reach the shore. Both were good swimmers but after two hours in the water, the young man, Lo Ping-sun, became over-exhausted and fainted. His fiancee, Miss Poon Yuen-ching, tied her own floats to his body and then towed him for six hours before getting close enough to Hong Kong to be spotted by a harbor patrol vessel. The harbor police took both aboard where they found that Lo was dead.

Despite the growing numbers of freedom swimmers, there has been no publicity about them inside China. Some swimmers say that they wouldn't have tried the swim to Hong Kong had they been warned in advance of the dangers.

Still, the compulsion seems to be strong again for those who can leave China to do so. Travellers report growing shortages of food in many parts of China, shortages of wool, cooking oil and even toilet tissue.

OPPOSITION WANTS MORE STUDY

Public Order Bill Passes Votes

By JOHN HAY

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's public order bill ran the gauntlet of opposition attacks again Wednesday as New Democrats and Creditistes tried to turn the bill back to committee of the whole for more detailed study.

The Liberals won 115 to 89 against an NDP motion for reconsideration of a clause making retroactive membership in the Front de Liberation du Quebec a crime.

A Creditiste motion to reconsider the bill's definition of "unlawful association" was turned down 160 to 28, with Liberals and Conservatives combining against the NDP and Creditistes. David MacDonald (PC—Egmont) and Roch LaSalle (PC—Joliette) supported the amendment.

The bill, introduced Nov. 2, moved into third and final reading stage Monday after about two weeks of clause-by-clause study.

DEBATE CONTINUES

Debate goes on today with Creditiste promises of more attempts to send the bill back to committee. Wednesday, urging reconsideration of the bill's definition of "unlawful association," Charles-Arthur Gauthier (Creditiste-Roberval) said the definition was unclear.

The definition, as amended in committee, declares illegal the Front de Liberation du Quebec or any group that advocates of force or crime to win "governmental change within Canada with respect to the province of Quebec or its relationship to Canada. . . ."

The bill should apply to all provinces, Mr. Gauthier said.

Justice Minister John Turner said the definition clearly applies to FLQ members or supporters anywhere in Canada. But it did apply to the overthrow only of the Quebec government or Quebec's relation to Canada, not to the governments of other provinces.

NDP Leader T. C. Douglas said his party supports the motion for reconsideration of the term "advocate" violent overthrow.

A more specific term, such as "incite," would be preferable.

David MacDonald said the vagueness of the definition was "clearly reprehensible."

Attacking the NDP motion for review of the retroactive clause, Ross Whicher (L—Bruce) scolded the opposition for "this nonsense of bringing in amendments at every opportunity."

"Members of the FLQ aren't a bunch of Sunday-school kids, you know," Mr. Whicher said.

EMOTION-FILLED DECISION

Rene Matte (Creditiste—Champlain) replied that MPs should not have to decide on giving the government extraordinary powers when emotions are high.

"We should not adopt legislation we would regret later on."

The public order bill would replace the regulations invoked Oct. 16 under the War Measures Act, with certain limitations on powers to hold people in jail without charge or trial.

Earlier in the Commons Mr. Turner said there had been discussions with the Quebec government on protection of persons released without charge under the War Measures Act regulations, but that any announcement must come from Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette.

Mr. Turner told the House that by Wednesday morning 453 persons had been arrested under the regulations, one re-arrested, 402 released and 51 detained, of whom two had been sentenced.

FLQ Man Possessed Phoney Explosives

MONTREAL (CP) —A young man who espoused the Front de Liberation du Quebec cause in 1968 found himself a two-time loser Wednesday.

For possession of what he thought was a quantity of dynamite and detonators, Serge Savard received a six-month jail term from Sessions Court Judge Irenee Lagarde.

But worse was the discovery through Crown evidence that he had been duped by a police agent who had supplied the material—20 stocks of wood and 17 disarmed detonators—through a third man.

The case dates back to March, 1968, when the presumed explosives were found at Savard's home at St. Sulpice, 20 miles east of Montreal.

The phoney explosives were substituted by Bernard Sicotte, an RCMP agent who had infiltrated the FLQ ranks. The original material was given to him for safekeeping by a man already acquitted of a similar charge.

As a result of this evidence, defence lawyer Serge Menard loudly protested the grounds of the charge and asked for an acquittal.

But Judge Lagarde ruled that the accused still harbored the belief that the material was real.

Arms Sale Talks End

LONDON (AP) — Britain has ended talks with Commonwealth states on its controversial plan for selling arms to South Africa, official sources reported today.

They said Britain also has received from South Africa a list of military requests and suggestions for strengthening co-operation on the defence of the sea lanes around the Cape of Good Hope.

At least 20 of 30 Commonwealth governments have advised Britain of their opposition to the arms sale to South Africa, which follows an official policy of racial segregation.

YOUTH HURLS PAINT-FILLED BOTTLE

Minister Helps Eject Heckler

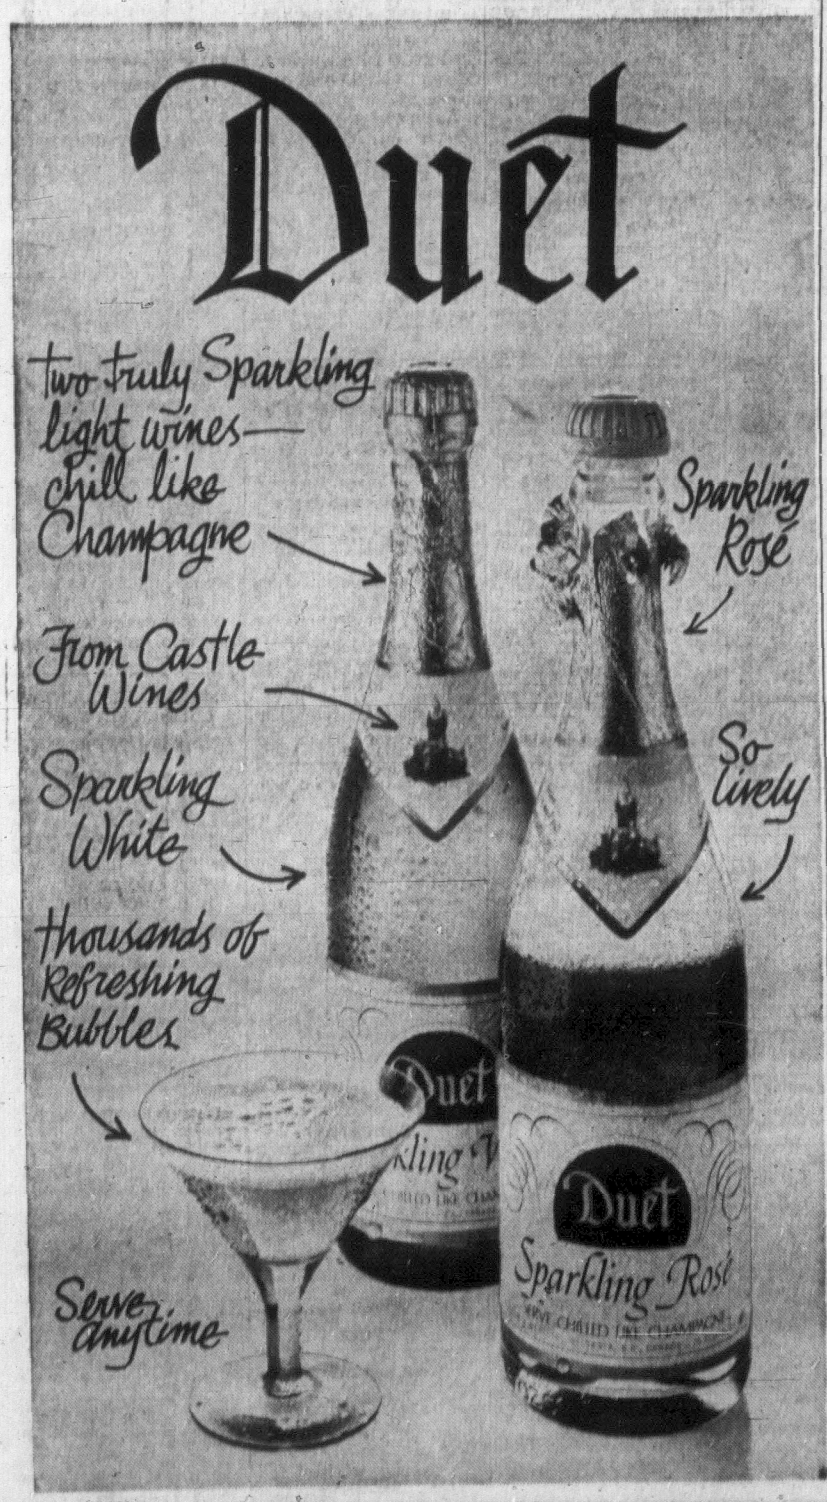

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey ran down from the platform to help eject a bottle-thrower from the audience at a public forum Wednesday on the right to strike.

The bottle, filled with red paint, glanced off the minister's foot but did not break.

After the youth who threw the bottle was dragged out, Mr. Mackasey returned to the platform and said, "What do I do now for an encore?"

Mr. Mackasey was one of four panel members. The others were lawyer Robert Perkins; George Gathercole, chairman of Ontario Hydro, and Thomas Edwards, co-ordinator for hospital bargaining of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The minister reaffirmed his support for the right to strike and his general endorsement of the principle that unions should have the right either to strike or to veto management-inspired changes during the life of an agreement that adversely affect the working conditions of employees.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Long years ago, when as a boy I lived in a warm climate, I noticed that in summer, and especially on windowsills or on the railings of porches, the paint would blister and loosen up off the wood to such an extent that children were able to pick off the loose pieces and eat them. Over the years, we physicians have come to recognize certain symptoms that are the dangerous effect of this bad habit children have of poisoning themselves with the lead in the paint.

Among the symptoms are lead colic, or cramp-like abdominal pains. Also, there are signs of injury to the brain, such as convulsions and spells of sleepiness and mild psychosis. Children have occasionally died in such spells. There are also signs of weakness in muscles like those of the wrists, and there sometimes is an anemia in which the child becomes pale and weak.

Fortunately, today we have a drug called Versene, which can help in getting lead out of a child's system. The important thing is for parents to protect their children from being poisoned by making sure there is no loose paint that can be chipped or scraped off, and when necessary, by repainting with lead-free paint, all surfaces that their children can reach. Care must be taken also to keep from small children toys painted with lead paint.

The dangers of lead poisoning from eating paint are greatest when children are playing on the porches of old, cheap, wooden houses in hot weather.

One of the serious health threats to a woman of child-bearing age is an ectopic pregnancy. As well educated women know, the microscopic ovum (egg) that comes from the ovary at a certain time during the menstrual cycle goes into one of the two fallopian tubes that come off the top of the womb. This occurrence is called ovulation. There, if it meets a spermatozoon from the man as it travels up through the womb, and if the ovum becomes fertilized, the fertilized egg moves down into the womb where is becomes attached and starts to grow into a fetus and eventually an infant.

Occasionally there is a little inflammation or something wrong with the inner lining of the fallopian tube which causes the fertilized ovum to stay in the tube and grow there. This is very dangerous to the woman, because the tube is very small, and before long the growing ovum causes it to burst. Then, unless the woman quickly goes to a surgeon and has the injured tube closed up, she can bleed to death.

The warning symptoms must be quickly noticed and taken seriously. The woman may have pain in the lower abdomen; she will not menstruate but will have irregular vaginal bleeding and tenderness in the pelvis.

Nothing Unusual, Says CFL Boss

TORONTO (CP) — Jake Gaudaur, Canadian Football League commissioner, said Tuesday there was nothing unusual about game films showing a ball carrier stepping over the goal line, even though officials had ruled there was no touchdown.

The commissioner was commenting on a report from Regina that films had shown Gary Lane, Saskatchewan Roughriders' quarterback, scored a third-quarter touchdown Sunday in the Western Conference final against Calgary Stampeders.

Officials ruled Lane had not crossed the goal line and Saskatchewan later lost the game at Regina 15-14 and the best-of-three playoff 2-1.

"In fact, this happens quite often," Gaudaur said in an interview.

"But you can't tell just by watching films when the whistle blew."

He said that even if films did indicate a player had scored but was not credited with the points, there was no way a game result could be altered.

Terrell Returning

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Former World Boxing Association heavyweight champion Ernie Terrell, 31, is scheduled to come out of retirement to fight Tony Doyle of Salt Lake City in Milwaukee on Dec. 15. Terrell retired in 1967.

Milwaukee's Big A, Big O Spell Success

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Big A and Big O are earning their letters with Milwaukee . . . and spelling success for the young Bucks.

Lew Alcindor and Oscar Robertson, a perfect parlay of scoring power and precision ball-handling, helped Milwaukee win its 16th game in row Wednesday night with a 113-87 National Basketball Association conquest of Detroit Pistons.

The Bucks' streak puts them two games shy of the NBA record held by the New York Knicks, whom they meet in a home-and-home series Friday and Saturday.

Philadelphia '76ers beat Buffalo Braves 99-92 in the first game of a double-header in Boston and Boston Celtics took the nightcap, beating Portland Trail Blazers 122-115 Wednesday night.

Elsewhere in the NBA, New York turned back Atlanta Hawks 114-111; San Diego Rockets crushed Cincinnati Royals 138-120 and San Francisco Warriors bounced Cleveland Cavaliers 108-99.

ALCINDOR SCORES 31

Alcindor, the NBA's Super Soph, scored 31 points and veteran smoothie Robertson, in his first year with Milwaukee, scored 15 and propelled the Bucks with his backcourt play.

Otto Moore scored 17 points for Detroit, which lost its eighth game in the last 10 after a spectacular 12-1 start.

Billy Cunningham scored 27 points and Hal Greer fired in 26 as Philadelphia wasted a 17-point lead, then pulled away in the final minutes of their opener at Boston Garden.

JoJo White scored 14 of his 23 points in the fourth period to break open the nightcap for Boston.

Willis Reed scored 35 points and took down 18 rebounds as New York whipped Atlanta for the second straight night. The Knicks beat the Hawks 128-119 in New York Tuesday night.

Elvin Hayes fired in 48 points and had 22 rebounds and Stu Lantz added 30 as San Diego ripped Cincinnati.

Jeff Mullins pocketed 25 points and Jerry Lucas added 21 as San Francisco handed Cleveland its 23rd loss in 24 starts.

Athletic Curtain Closed to Czechs

VIENNA (AP) — Czechoslovakia has banned its athletes from going to Western countries. Coaches and trainers were given a maximum of two years to work in "capitalist" countries.

The ban was effective for all foreign countries, but it was apparent that the new harsh measures announced by the Czechoslovak Physical Training Union were especially designed to curtail further sports relations with the West.

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali was named October's "Boxer-of-the-Month" by the World Boxing Council for his third-round technical knockout of Jerry Quarry in Atlanta.

ENGLAND TOPS GERMANY

Jubilee Expands Kidney Program

Royal Jubilee Hospital will expand its artificial kidney treatment program from a three to a four-bed unit through purchase of new, more compact and servicable dialysers.

The capital region's hospital board approved the purchase at its meeting Wednesday. The machines and related equipment will cost $42,600.

The hospital, which now cares for 14 patients on the artificial kidney program, will be able to add three or four more. And it hopes to save operating expenses because the new machines are easier to clean and service.

Code Adopted

WINNIPEG (CP) — Delegates to the Canadian Association of Exhibitions annual meeting have approved in principle a midway safety code which would standardize the safety aspects of design, maintenance and operation of midway amusement rides.

Association president Elwood Hart of Saskatoon said in an interview today the unified code, which has been drafted from several general building codes, may come into force either as law or standards in 1971.

"We're a specialized business," Hart explained. "Up to now, no code that applies specifically to us has been written in Canada."

Blood Clinic At Sanscha Hall

A clinic was held at the Empress Hotel Wednesday where 92 units were collected. Today it is being held at CFB Esquimalt.

Uvic Team Whizzing In TV Quiz

University of Victoria's student quiz team will return to Ottawa Dec. 4 for a possible four more rounds in the Canadian Television network's national competition.

Uvic knocked McGill University and Waterloo University teams out of the running last weekend.

Each victory means $1,000 in scholarships to the winning school and $500 to the loser.

Names of the other universities in the next rounds of the sudden-death quiz are not yet known.

Members of the Uvic team are Bruce Izard, Dennis Johnson, Robert McDougall, all of Victoria, and Glen Paruk of Port Alberni. Izard, Johnson and Paruk have had experience on high school Reach For the Top programs sponsored by the CBC.

Prof. Alfred Loft of the history department is the coach.

No Base Sought

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain has no program for creating a major naval base in the Indian Ocean, Anthony Royle, foreign office undersecretary, said in a written parliamentary reply.

Police Court

Two young men were sentenced to jail terms Wednesday by Judge William Ostler who said that drug use by each of the accused led them into trouble.

David J. MacInnis, 24, of no fixed address, was sentenced to six months on one count of theft over $50 and a second count of possession of housebreaking tools. The terms are to be served concurrently.

Malcolm P. Cunningham, 17, of no fixed address, was sentenced to four months for possession of stolen goods over $50. Ostler said he would recommend a forestry camp for the term.

Ostler told MacInnis it was a "tragedy" to see him in court because of his involvement in drugs.

He said he saw similar histories occurring more frequently in presentence reports and termed it a "national malignancy."

Both the accused pleaded guilty Nov. 16.

Michael Cross, 18, of 841 Ellery, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a one-year probation for charges of dangerous driving, wilful damage under $50, common assault, minor in possession of liquor and driving without a safety inspection sticker on his vehicle.

Ostler noted that the offences all branched from a single incident and that the accused was now attending vocational school and doing well.

Cross was also given three-month driving ban.

Dennis Todd, 27, of 60 Menzies, was remanded to Nov. 30 to elect his trial method after a four-count trafficking charge was read against him.

All offences dealt with marijuana, the dates being given as July 30, Aug. 1, Aug. 1, and Aug. 12.

Bail was set at $3,000.

Peter W. Yurick, 21, of Vernon, was fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to shoplifting a pair of jeans from the Bay Nov. 24.

Mary Elizabeth Dillon, 39 of 2533 Blanshard, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a six-month probation for shoplifting.

She pleaded guilty Nov. 9 to taking merchandise, worth $15.90, from the Bay without paying for it.

Clarence Jackle, 19, of 1035 Pendergast, was fined $500 for impaired driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

Ostler fined the accused $350 for the impaired charge and $150 for leaving the scene and dismissed a further charge of carrying a concealed weapon.

T. Borge Larsen, of 835 Pemberton, was committed for trial in a higher court for fraud at the end of a preliminary hearing.

Police arrested 19 blacks and six whites Wednesday after they left their barricaded headquarters in a New Orleans housing project to go for a ride in automobiles rented for them by actress Jane Fonda, police said. All were charged with criminal trespass in connection with the takeover of the apartment by the National Committee to Combat Facism, an arm of the Black Panthers. "I don't know if Miss Fonda was aware that she unwittingly helped us, and I thank her," said Police Superintendent Clarence Giarrusso.

An escort business — it has nothing to do with bodyguards — is thriving in Montreal. The escorts are attractive girls engaged to serve as h o s tesses at conventions, exhibitions and press conferences. "In the 10 months since we started we have had a steady increase in clientele," says Gail Wood, 24, who runs Escort Services, a Quebec-registered company. "Our hardest problem is making the public realize that the service is legitimate."

A team of Canadian forces demolition experts has bared Roger Vilder's missing breast. The breast, a silicone sculpture called Every Man's Dream No. 1, was stolen in its frame from the Winnipeg Art Gallery on Nov. 19. Tuesday it reappeared in a parcel an unidentified man left at the lost-and-found department of The Bay. Store employees, fearing the package might contain explosives, called in explosives experts from the Canadian Forces Base. Inside the box, pinned to Every Man's Dream No. 1, was a note: "Thank you for being so polite."

Robert Fischer of the United States became the new leader of an inter-zonal preliminary tournament in Spain leading to the world chess championships after a series of adjourned matches Wednesday. Fischer, who had three adjourned matches, won one, drew one and lost the third. Fischer, with semi-slovan defence, defeated Esim Geller of the Soviet Union in 73 moves, was beaten by Brent Larsen of Denmark with Sicilian defence in 53 moves, and drew with Milan Matulovic of Yugoslavia, with Sicilian defence, in 60 moves.

A formal investigation into a blow-out and fire at an Arctic gas well will begin immediately, Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien announced Wednesday. The Panarctic Oils Ltd. well on King Christian Island blew wild Oct. 25 when drilling reached a depth of 2,010 feet.

Crash Kills Weapons Man

BOULDER CITY, Nev. (AP) — A downdraft that apparently sent a small plane diving into Lake Mead took the life of Theos Thompson, 52, top man in nuclear-weapons development and testing and a member of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission.

Thompson was killed along with two other passengers when the National Park Service plane crashed in 300 feet of water Wednesday. The pilot survived.

An AEC spokesman said it appeared the plane, flying at 50 or 60 feet above the water, hit a down draft in the 60-mile-an-hour winds whipping over the lake.

The park service said Thompson was along to observe the lake and surrounding area in connection with weapons testing at the Nevada nuclear test site about 75 miles away.

Nothing Unusual, Says CFL Boss

TORONTO (CP) — Jake Gaudaur, Canadian Football League commissioner, said Tuesday there was nothing unusual about game films showing a ball carrier stepping over the goal line, even though officials had ruled there was no touchdown.

The commissioner was commenting on a report from Regina that films had shown Gary Lane, Saskatchewan Roughriders' quarterback, scored a third-quarter touchdown Sunday in the Western Conference final against Calgary Stampeders.

Officials ruled Lane had not crossed the goal line and Saskatchewan later lost the game at Regina 15-14 and the best-of-three playoff 2-1.

"In fact, this happens quite often," Gaudaur said in an interview.

"But you can't tell just by watching films when the whistle blew."

He said that even if films did indicate a player had scored but was not credited with the points, there was no way a game result could be altered.

Athletic Curtain Closed to Czechs

VIENNA (AP) — Czechoslovakia has banned its athletes from going to Western countries. Coaches and trainers were given a maximum of two years to work in "capitalist" countries.

The ban was effective for all foreign countries, but it was apparent that the new harsh measures announced by the Czechoslovak Physical Training Union were especially designed to curtail further sports relations with the West.

Sea Research Centre May Go to Vancouver

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Vancouver appears to have the edge over Victoria as the site of a major oceanographic institute, it was learned today.

A survey two years ago proposed that Victoria is the more logical location on the basis of logistics involving best use of research ships and also that the fisheries biological station is located at Nanaimo.

But today, W. M. Cameron, director of the marine sciences branch, in Ottawa said location of an institute near scientific and "particularly marine industries" is more important than immediate proximity to its ships.

Dr. Cameron's statement came on the heels of a recommendation by the Science Council of Canada Wednesday that urgent priority by given creation of a West Coast counterpart of the Bedford Oceanographic Institute near Halifax.

A study by federal government agencies during the coming year will decide the proposed research centre's location and size, said Cameron.

The government has begun development of a Canada Centre for Inland Waters at Burlington, Ont., which amalgamates multi-disciplinary personnel into a new type of centre involving water, weather, pollution, economic, hydrographic and even social science experts.

Involve All Facets of Research

This greatly-expanded type of institute is now being considered for the West Coast, undertaking all facets of research connected with fresh and salt water on the Pacific and western Arctic Ocean coasts as well as deep-sea research.

Dr. Cameron said such a centre might find its location near scientific "and particularly marine industries" more important than immediate proximity to its ships.

"Besides two universities and the oceanographic group at the University of B.C., the Vancouver area has the full range of marine industries which would be extremely important to a multi-disciplinary centre and Victoria has almost none," he said.

"This is one of the things that will have to be looked into pretty closely over the next year."

The government already has pulled about a dozen fisheries experts from Nanaimo to temporary quarters in Vancouver Harbor while awaiting hard decisions on the West Coast program which was to follow completion of the $25 million inland waters centre at Burlington in 1972.

From Okanagan to St. John River

The Burlington centre ultimately will accommodate up to 1,600 staff scientists and technicians, visiting professors and students undertaking research into such questions as the cost-benefit ratio of various municipal sewage treatment techniques to documenting stream flow rates.

It's area of operations would cover the interior from the Okanagan Lakes to the St. John River and from the Mackenzie Delta to the U.S. boundary.

It has been operating since its creation two years ago out of 50 mobile trailers at Burlington. The first of the permanent complex of four major buildings was officially opened last week. The trailer laboratories will be re-used for field studies.

The original intent was to begin serious planning of a West Coast institute after the Burlington centre was finished — providing a lead time of about five years for its development. Expansion of the Bedford Institute into a multi-disciplinary complex was to follow.

But the science council's recommendation urged drastic speed-up of the West Coast project as part of a massive increase in marine programs.

Dr. Cameron said the impending study will have to determine whether this is feasible. It also will have to examine such questions as the exact scope of disciplines and geography to be assigned to the West Coast institute and how to fit it into the government re-organization involved in establishing a department of environmental affairs.

AGED CARDINALS HIT BACK AT POPE

ROME (UPI) — Two cardinals barred from any future role in governing the Roman Catholic Church because of age hit back today at Pope Paul VI. One implied the pontiff was a sick man.

French Cardinal Eugene Tisserant, 86, dean of the 127-man College of Cardinals, said it was "public knowledge" the Pope was so feeble or ill eight days ago that aides had to help him from his weekly general audience in St. Peter's Basilica.

Italian Cardinal Alfredo Ottaviani, 80, former head of the Vatican Department for the Doctrine of the Faith (the former holy office), accused the pope of contemptuously overriding church tradition and law in issuing his decree.

Bennett Says PM 'Caused Crisis'

Times News Services

Premier Bennett today lashed out at Prime Minister Trudeau, blaming him for "Canada's greatest crisis" in Quebec.

It was Bennett's first real statement on the recent wave of terrorism in Quebec and it came in angry response to a report that Trudeau had told B.C. Liberals that the way to stop the flooding of the Skagit Valley is to fire Bennett.

Asked about the report on his way to cabinet today, Bennett snapped:

"Oh yes, Mr. Trudeau knows full well that he and his Liberals made an awful mess in the province of Quebec and created Canada's greatest crisis.

WILD STATEMENTS

"I give him credit for the action he took when things got desperate but he is to blame for that and these kind of wild statements by Trudeau are just to take the attention of the Canadian people and the people of British Columbia. . . ."

Asked what Trudeau should have done to avoid a crisis in Quebec, Bennett replied:

"Well the situation is this — his policies have been like driving a horse with the whip in one hand and the reins in the other, the one hand not knowing what the other doeth, trying to spend money in Quebec at the same time creating tight money, high interest rates and killing employment.

"The very fact that he created unemployment made for conditions in Quebec and led to this difficulty."

During the peak of the

Victorians Sympathetic To Change

Victoria interests were charitable today toward indications from Ottawa that the proposed oceanographic institute may be located in Vancouver, instead of here as originally planned.

David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, noted that the government had promised on three separate occasions that Victoria would be site of the institute.

"But if, as indicated, the institute in its final form is a much bigger project than originally planned, there may be good reasons for considering a new site as well," Anderson said.

MONEY ISSUE

"If there are reasons, like saving the Canadian taxpayers money, I'll listen to them." He said Victoria already is beneficiary of "lots" of federal spending, while Vancouver has "very, very little."

Uvic biologist Dr. Mark Bell said the decision to make the institute a vastly enlarged, multi-disciplinary centre was an encouraging development.

"In a venture of this magnitude, you have to go where the talent is," Bell said. "As nice as it would be to have the institute associated with our university, it may be necessary to deny parochial views in the national interest.

BOON TO CANADA

"Such an enlarged institute would be a boon generally to Canada and the West."

Biology department head Dr. Gordon Fields said he would be disappointed if the government decides on Vancouver, after preliminary studies had strongly recommended the Esquimalt harbor area.

"We know that the Bedford Institute (the operating Nova Scotia prototype of what is planned for B.C.) has provided strong support for oceanographic and related work at Dalhousie University in Halifax," Fields said.

"We had hoped for similar co-operative development here." There are two biolo-

'HE REFUSED TO CO-OPERATE'

RCMP Quizzing Doctor

By STEVE HUME

A Canadian doctor being questioned in connection with the Pachena Bay murder of Gordon Kralt has so far refused to talk to three RCMP detectives, San Francisco police said today.

"He refused to co-operate with them yesterday. Whether he will co-operate with them today remains to be seen," a San Francisco police official said in a telephone interview.

He said Dr. Glen Stewart, 43, who had been living in a San Francisco apartment under the name of Campbell since Nov. 10, is being held in the city prison.

"The charge is: hold for immigration authorities, but he is being questioned by three RCMP detectives."

Two of the RCMP officers have been identified as Cpl. M. H. Nelson and Const. William Erickson. The third officer is a Prince Rupert sergeant investigating the disappearance of a British Columbia woman, according to a police spokesman in that city.

The police official said he had no information to verify or deny reports that U.S. immigration authorities intended to escort Stewart to the Canadian border and turn him over to RCMP.

"We're still trying to find out what they intend to do ourselves," he said.

Stewart tried to kill himself Tuesday when two immigration inspectors arrived at his apartment in an attempt to determine whether he was lawfully in the United States.

The doctor slammed and barricaded his door and tried to gas himself and a woman companion, 31-year-old Maria Trigiani, by turning on the kitchen stove and breaking off the controls.

The two were rescued by the immigration men who broke into the apartment through a window.

Kralt, 23-year-old caretaker at the Shantyman's Christian Association camp on Pachena Bay, dropped from sight Oct. 23. His decomposed body was found Sunday 600 yards from the lodge where he lived.

The former Duncan resident apparently was shot to death.

Raiders Missed Cells

SAIGON (UPI) — Hanoi Radio warned today that the United States "will have to bear the full responsibility for the lives of the American pilots" in any commando raids on prisoner of war camps in North Vietnam.

Broadcasts by the official North Vietnamese radio monitored in Saigon claimed again that a "number" of captured American pilots were wounded in last weekend's raid. The broadcasts revived speculation that the 50-man commando team that landed in the Son Tay POW compound may have missed cells where the Americans were being held by several hundred yards or less.

Spokesmen in Saigon refused to comment on the broadcast in keeping with normal U.S. policy.

One broadcast said that "U.S. warplanes bomb-strafed the city of Son Tay, killing 10 civilians and wounding seven others. Specifically, an air pirate prisoner camp was severely hit by shells, bullets and bombs and a number of pirates wounded."

Six Convicts Free After Jail Break

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — Eleven prisoners escaped from Prince Albert penitentiary Wednesday night and six described as dangerous were still at large today.

It was the second mass escape from the penitentiary in three months. Seven men escaped Aug. 24 but all were recaptured.

Three men involved in the August escape were among those who fled Wednesday night — Robert Desjarlais, 28, Douglas Letendre, 26, and Wilfred Eadie, 22. Desjarlais remained at large, while the other two where recaptured along with Stanley Whittaker, 25, Harry Lewis, 24, and Peter Harrison, 31.

The five were arrested at an RCMP roadblock 20 miles south of the city.

They had allegedly stolen a station wagon from Jim Dix of Prince Albert, who said they had a knife.

The six still at large all have long criminal records filled with violence, Warden John Norfield said.

Desjarlais, of Lac La Biche, Alta., was serving a life sentence for non-capital murder and two years for escaping lawful custody in the Aug. 24 break.

Mickey Hleboff, 25, Kamsack, Sask.; Ralph Cochrane, 43, Vancouver; George Leclerc, 30, Montreal; Hubert Bollmann 37, Edmonton, and Ronald Twerdoclib, 19, Regina were also still at large.

Hleboff was serving an indefinite term.

Bail Reply Next Week

MONTREAL (CP) — A bail application by lawyer Robert Lemieux, charged with seditious conspiracy and membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec, was taken under advisement today until next week.

Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay of Court of Queen's Bench told Lemieux: "I will do my best to render a decision by the beginning of next week."

But he added later that he will accept additional written arguments from Lemieux until Tuesday.

Police Guarding Red Offices

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Soviet diplomatic and commercial buildings were under heavy guard by police today after a bomb blast at the Manhattan office of the Soviet airline Aeroflot.

Federal agents and police also tightened security around Aeroflot planes and at terminals at Kennedy International Airport and airports in Washington.

Because of the words "never again" used by an anonymous person who telephoned two news agencies after the bomb blast, suspicion centred on the Jewish Defence League, a militant group of young Jews who have been protesting alleged persecution of Jews in the Soviet Union.

The blast knocked out huge plate glass windows on both floors of the building, which houses the offices of Aeroflot and of Intourist, the Soviet tourist agency.

Armies of Beggars Steal Aid Supplies

BHOLA (Reuter) — The official casualty toll in the cyclone and tidal wave disaster which struck East Pakistan two weeks ago rose to 200,000 as relief workers coped today with a new problem — armies of ragged beggars stealing supplies destined for survivors.

The beggars are descending on the coastal strip ravaged by the wind and wall of water which hit it Nov. 13, grabbing food and blankets being delivered for the starving survivors. Badly needed flat-bottomed British and American boats began ferrying the supplies to the stricken area Wednesday.

The official fatality toll of 200,000 included more than 175,000 confirmed dead and nearly 25,000 missing and presumed dead. On the shattered island of Bhola, President Yahya Khan spent the night after a day-long tour of the worst hit areas, himself handing out food and blankets to sobbing men, women and children.

A government opposition leader today accused Yahya's administration of "criminal neglect" in getting food to survivors of the cyclone and tidal wave that devastated his country.

Yahya heard the martial law administrator of the government demand immediate trials of officials who he said have been charging money to victims of the storm before food is delivered.

"We are doing our damndest," said Yahya.

Egyptians 'On Alert'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The newspaper Al Jarida reported today that Egypt has put its land, air and naval forces on maximum alert to face a "warlike" Israeli buildup of troops and armor east of the Suez canal.

The newspaper's Cairo correspondent said the Israeli buildup was revealed by recent Egyptian spy flights over the Sinai Desert.

The paper quoted a senior Egyptian government source as saying the ceasefire along the canal "is now passing through its most critical hours."

Rhodesia Copies Apartheid

SALISBURY (Reuter) — The Rhodesian government announced today details of a controversial apartheid-style bill allowing for the banishment of non-whites from white residential areas.

The new legislation also will — for the first time in Rhodesia's history — provide for setting up an official South African-type classification tribunal to decide a person's race.

Publication of the long-awaited bill by Premier Ian Smith's government dealt another heavy blow to slender hopes that new contacts between London and Salisbury could make any progress toward a settlement of the Anglo-Rhodesian independence deadlock.

Rhodesia broke away from Britain over British insistence of majority rule in a predominantly-black country, and proclaimed its independence Nov. 11, 1965. Rhodesia severed its links with the Crown last year when it became a republic.

HICKEL TOOK JOB 'TOO SERIOUSLY'

Ecologists Horrified by Firing

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Conservationists who were horrified at the appointment of Walter J. Hickel as interior secretary two years ago were even more horrified Wednesday when President Nixon abruptly fired him — after Hickel refused to resign.

The official White House explanation, after a half-hour meeting between the president and Hickel, as a lack of "mutual confidence."

Environment-minded observers in Congress and conservation groups put a more specific interpretation on it: Hickel took his job seriously, was too independent, and so became a maverick in the Nixon administration.

NEW APPOINTMENT

There was little comment, however, on the president's announced intention to appoint Representative Rogers C. B. Morton of Maryland, chairman of the Republican national committee, to the interior post.

Authoritative sources here said Morton had known for more than a week that he would be the next secretary of interior. The towering (6-foot-7) congressman conferred with both President Nixon and Attorney General John Mitchell early last week and came away "90 per cent certain" that he would be taking over the interior post.

Hickel, in a brief statement, said in effect he found it impossible to play the White House kind of game.

Ronald Ziegler, White House press secretary, said of the sudden firing:

By DENNIS BELL

TORONTO (CP) — The first officer of a doomed Air Canada jet liner apologized three times to the pilot, apparently for prematurely deploying the aircraft's spoiler system minutes before the jet smashed into a farm field July 5, killing all 109 persons aboard.

A transcript of what was said in the cockpit in the final minutes of California Galaxie Flight 621 was read into the record of a federal inquiry today by commission counsel B. J. MacKinnon.

The transcript was made from the DC-8-63 liner's flight recorder. It included the voices of Capt. Peter Hamilton, first officer Donald Rowland, second officer Harry Hill and ground control at Toronto International Airport.

The big jetliner lost two engines and most of its right wing after bounding off a runway from a height of 60 feet.

After runway impact, Capt. Hamilton attempted to circle the airport for a second landing approach. However, three explosions tore the jet's right wing apart and sent it nose first into a farmer's field north of the airport.

SLOWS PLANE

The ground spoilers system is a braking device of steel panels along the wings which, when deployed to an upright position, slow and steady a landing aircraft.

In this case, the spoilers were deployed while the jet liner, bound for Los Angeles from Montreal with a short stop in Toronto, was still in the air.

Sixteen seconds before the jet slammed into the field First Officer Rowland said over the cockpit intercom:

"Pete, sorry."

An explosion followed.

"All right," replied the captain.

"We've got an explosion," Capt. Hamilton said, 11 seconds before final impact.

The last communication from the aircraft was one of the officers saying four seconds before it crashed:

"We've lost a wing."

"No! No! No!," said the captain, a split-second after the ground spoilers were deployed.

A number of communications, most of them in technical terms, followed between the cockpit and Toronto ground control.

The captain told ground control:

"Oh, we'll go around again. I think we'll go straight around.

"Get the gear up please, Don."

About two minutes before final impact the control tower asked flight 621:

"OK, sir, your intentions, please."

"First, we would like to circle back for anither approach on Runway 32," first officer Rowland replied.

"Runway 32 is closed due to debris on the runway," answered the control tower, which gave the aircraft a new heading for a different approach.

The answer was garbled.

Capt. Hamilton, a veteran of 30 years flying, also tried to shut down systems to the lost No. 4 engine.

But apparently the effort was unsuccessful.

"The whole thing is jammed," said the captain.

Pope En Route To Far East, Stops in Iran

TEHRAN (AP) — Pope Paul, first pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church to visit Iran, landed for a brief stop today on his flight to Asia and the Pacific.

He was welcomed at Tehran's Mehrabad Airport by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi, Premier Amir Abass Hoveida, the cabinet and presidents of the two houses of parliament.

The Pope was cheered by 2,000 representatives of 500,000 Iranian Catholics and other Christian minorities in this largely Moslem land.

The shah stayed with the Pope during his whole stop and saw him off as he departed. The crowd cheered the Pontiff as he waved to them before entering his plans.

The shah and his prime minister and cabinet ministers held private discussions with the Pope as he rested in the royal pavillion of Mehrabad Airport.

No charges have been laid against Stewart in connection with the murder, but Port Alberni RCMP said the man is wanted by them under a bench warrant issued Thursday.

They said Stewart skipped bail while awaiting trial in Port Alberni on a charge of possession of stolen property over $50.

RCMP said the charge involved a life-raft worth $500 which was stolen from a university biological station at Bamfield, about four miles north of Pachena Bay.

Stewart pleaded not guilty to the charge in October and was free on $2,500 cash bail.

He was described as a "nomadic" type by RCMP, roaming from port to port and living in his 35-foot yacht Gypsy.

Stewart had been in the Port Alberni area for several months before leaving by boat for the United States in late October.

RAN AGROUND

The Gypsy ran aground and sank off the mouth of the Columbia River Nov. 7, and U.S. Coast Guard records show the rescue of Stewart, Miss Trigiani, Susan Whitehouse of Saanichton, and Richard Thompson of Surrey, England. Police were also seeking Miss Whitehouse and Thompson for questioning.

They are looking for a white, 1964 Volkswagen, licence number BHD-856.

Divers were still active today in an underwater search for the car at points Pachena Point north to the Alberni Inlet.

They are searching the sea bottom at allpossible places where the car might have been driven or pushed into the water.

RCMP said they believe Kralt was shot with a "large calibre" gun, although advanced decomposition made it difficult for the corner to give an exact cause of death.

It is believed Kralt had been dead for three weeks before the body was found. Decomposition was so extensive that positive identification of the body was only made by examining dental work.

FOUND BULLET

Police said they have one vital concrete clue they are investigating. They discovered a bullet in the laundry room in the main hall of the building where Kralt is believed to have been shot.

RCMP declined to elaborate.

Stewart is still licensed to practise medicine in B.C. ad it is reported he lived at Courtenay and practised at Comox and Cumberland during 1963 and 1964. He later practised at Sicamous, but left there in 1968.

A spokesman for the fishing village of Bamfield said today a boat which was identified by police as the Gypsy had been in and out of the Bamfield area all summer.

"It didn't have a name on it. The owner was known to us as a Dr. Quinn," he said.

crisis last month, Bennett declined to comment on the grounds it was a federal matter. At the Social Credit convention earlier this month, he urged delegates to be "very tolerant" of the people of Quebec at this time.

But Bennett told the convention the Trudeau government should be defeated because of its policy of fighting inflation by creating unemployment.

Trudeau's suggestion that Bennett should be defeated to stop the Skagit flooding was reported by Dave Brousson, Liberal MLA for Vancouver-Capilano, at the Liberal convention in Ottawa last weekend. (See also Page 26.)

OTHER COMMENTS

In other comments on the Quebec situation:

● Rene Levesque warned Wednesday night that if Quebec's political and economic structures are not replaced in two to five years the province "will suffer through a period of more repression, more tension and then anarchy."

The leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois told about 1,200 persons at a Montreal rally called to defend civil liberties under the War Measures Act: "I'm not a prophet, but I can see what's happening to Quebec."

He said Quebec's problems are "to great and too widespread" to be solved by "patchwork" and propaganda from the provincial and federal governments.

● In Vancouver Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said today the Liberal government has ducked its responsibilities in the Quebec terrorist situation.

MUST BE INFORMED

In a speech to a joint luncheon of the Men's Canadian Club and the Kiwanis Club, Stanfield said the government "must inform the Canadian people" about what was going on in Quebec when it decided to use the War Measures Act.

The Conservative leader blistered the Trudeau government for denying the people information on which a valid judgment of government actions could be made.

● New laws aimed at quelling Quebec terrorists should have been applied years ago, Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said Wednesday in North Bay.

"If the government had acted last year as it did six weeks ago, Laporte would not be dead and Cross would not be kidnapped," Caouette told a Chamber of Commerce meeting.

He said he intends to tell the House the temporary public order bill "is not severe enough for those assassins and those kidnappers."

POLICE HIT UNLIGHTED BICYCLISTS

The increased number of bicyclists in Victoria has brought a crackdown by city police on night riders without lights.

Inspector Richard Berry said today an average of two or three cyclists a night are stopped for unlit bikes. The fine is $10.

He said both adults and juveniles are offenders. The adults are subject to the fine while the juveniles must appear in juvenile court.

The bylaw, he noted, states that bicycles must be ridden with lights one hour after sunset.

noted that the terms of the new legislation appear to cut directly across at least two of the five settlement principles laid down by the British, which relate to ending racial discrimination and to racially retrogressive legislation.

Under provisions of the bill, 15 house owners of a majority race in any suburb may apply to the local authority for the area to be declared exclusively theirs should another race infiltrate.

If an investigator finds that racial disharmony and a depreciation in property values has been caused by the infiltration, then the local authority will give three months notice to "excluded persons" to quit their homes.

gists specializing in oceanography now at Uvic.

J. A. Wallace, general manager of Yarrows Ltd., said he would "cheer for it" if an expanded institute at Vancouver could make use of a greater source of services there.

"If it means a step-up in ships and shipping, it should be supported by everyone on the coast," he said. "If we start protesting now, the whole thing could be thrown into limbo again. I for one won't stand in the way of it."

Almost unnoticed in the furore over Hickel's dismissal was the fact Morton will become the first interior secretary from an eastern state in the department's 121-year history — an indication of its modern evolution from a western landlord to a nationwide resource manager.

Hickel, then governor of Alaska, was viewed with suspicion by conservationists when he arrived in Washington as Nixon's nominee to the interior post in December, 1968.

Widely viewed as a "resource-exploiter and a pawn of oil interests," Hickel was questioned for days by the Senate interior committee and was the last cabinet mamber confirmed.

But former opponents have changed their minds and now express admiration for Hickel's efforts to protect the environment.

And Hickel's aide, Sam Love, 23, said young people had been impressed with Hickel's now-famous letter to the president following the U.S. incursion into Cambodia last spring, urging the president to pay greater heed to the voice of youth.

That letter, whose rapid leak to the press probably contributed to Hickel's downfall, "really struck home to me that this guy knew what the battle was all about."

Rumors had been flying for months that someone in the White House wanted Hickel out.

Hickel had no intention of being encouraged to resign by rumors leaking from White House aides.

Then came the call from the president, and as Hickel put it, "the president personally terminated me."

U.S. Considers Ban On Anti-Freeze Sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission said Wednesday it is considering banning du Pont's Zerex anti-freeze from the market for alleged adverse effects on automobile cooling systems.

The possibility of an unprecedented outright ban on sales of the anti-leak antifreeze was raised in an order accompanying a proposed complaint that accuses du Pont and its advertising agency of false advertising.

Du Pont called the FTC complaint totally unjustified. It said the commission made no complaint when the company submitted both technical data and the finished commercial for approval.

COOLING SYSTEM

As for claims that Zerex damages cooling systems, the company said that although Zerex is sold with an unconditional consumer guarantee complaints have amounted to only one-one hundredth of a per cent of sales. It added that complaints "characteristically have been caused by dirty and corroded cooling systems, not by Zerex."

In another action announced Tuesday, the commission approved complaints challenging advertising by two large toy manufacturers, Mattel, Inc., of Hawthorne, Calif., and Topper Corp. of Elizabeth, N.J.

Claims made by both firms about racing cars and track sets and by Mattel about a doll are deceptive and prey on the vulnerability of children, the FTC said.

LEAK STOPS

The FTC took particular exception to the can-stabbing television commercial for du Pont's Zerex anti-leak antifreeze. The commercial shows a can of antifreeze being punctured with an instrument. At first a steady stream flows through the hole but the leak stops within seconds.

The complaint alleges that the demonstration is "false, misleading and deceptive because it is not, as represented, evidence which actually proves that Zerex will stop leaks which actually occur in automotive cooling systems under normal operating conditions."

In addition, the FTC said, du Pont has not told the public that Zerex may damage radiator coils, thermostats and pressure caps through the buildup of deposits.

In its complaints against the toy companies, the FTC specifically challenges advertising of Mattel's Hot Wheels racing car and track sets and its Dancerina Doll. The complaint against Topper cites the firm's Johnny Lightning racing car and track sets.

The complaints say television commercials and packaging designs for both cars and track sets misrepresent the appearance or performance of the toys, falsely represent how they are used and carry meaningless endorsements by well-known racing-car drivers.

TORIES TRY BLOCK OF AUDITOR'S BILL

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservatives tried Wednesday to force withdrawal of a government bill that would limit the authority of Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson, with no success.

Gerald Baldwin (PC—Peace River) said the bill represents an attempt by the government to harass and inhibit Henderson.

Baldwin referred particularly to the effect on the auditor-general's scrutiny of a destroyer construction program.

However, he was unsuccessful in getting the unanimous consent needed to get the motion on the floor.

Florida Freezing

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A November cold wave drove temperatures below freezing over much of Florida Wednesday, striking hard at winter vegetables and flowers but apparently doing little damage to the biggest orange and grapefruit crop in the state's history.

Most frigid spot in the state was the capital city of Tallahassee, where the temperature plunged to 13 and a transient was found dead, apparently from cold exposure.

A Song From Benson?

Benson is expected to sing a Santa Claus tune for Canadian taxpayers next week or soon after.

Informants said Wednesday the government will announce soon, probably this week, its decision whether to present a late fall budget or a less lengthy statement on means to stimulate the economy and employment.

The budget or statement will be presented in the Commons next week or early in the following week and, sources indicate, it will include tax cuts.

The form of any such tax cuts is secret. Works Minister Arthur Laing told the Commons Nov. 13 when he was acting prime minister that the government's measures "will have the effect of stimulating employment in the field which is the total responsibility of the government and encouraging it in the private sector."

Election Draws 105 Candidates

VANCOUVER (CP) — A record number of 105 candidates, including 12 for mayor, have filed nomination papers for Vancouver's Dec. 9 civic election.

Deadline for nominations was noon Wednesday.

In addition to the mayor's job, there are 10 openings on city council, nine on school board and seven on park board.

ID System Denied

TORONTO (CP) — The general manager of Polaroid Corp. of Canada Wednesday denied newspaper reports from Washington that his firm is negotiating with the Quebec government to provide machines for an identification system for all Quebec residents.

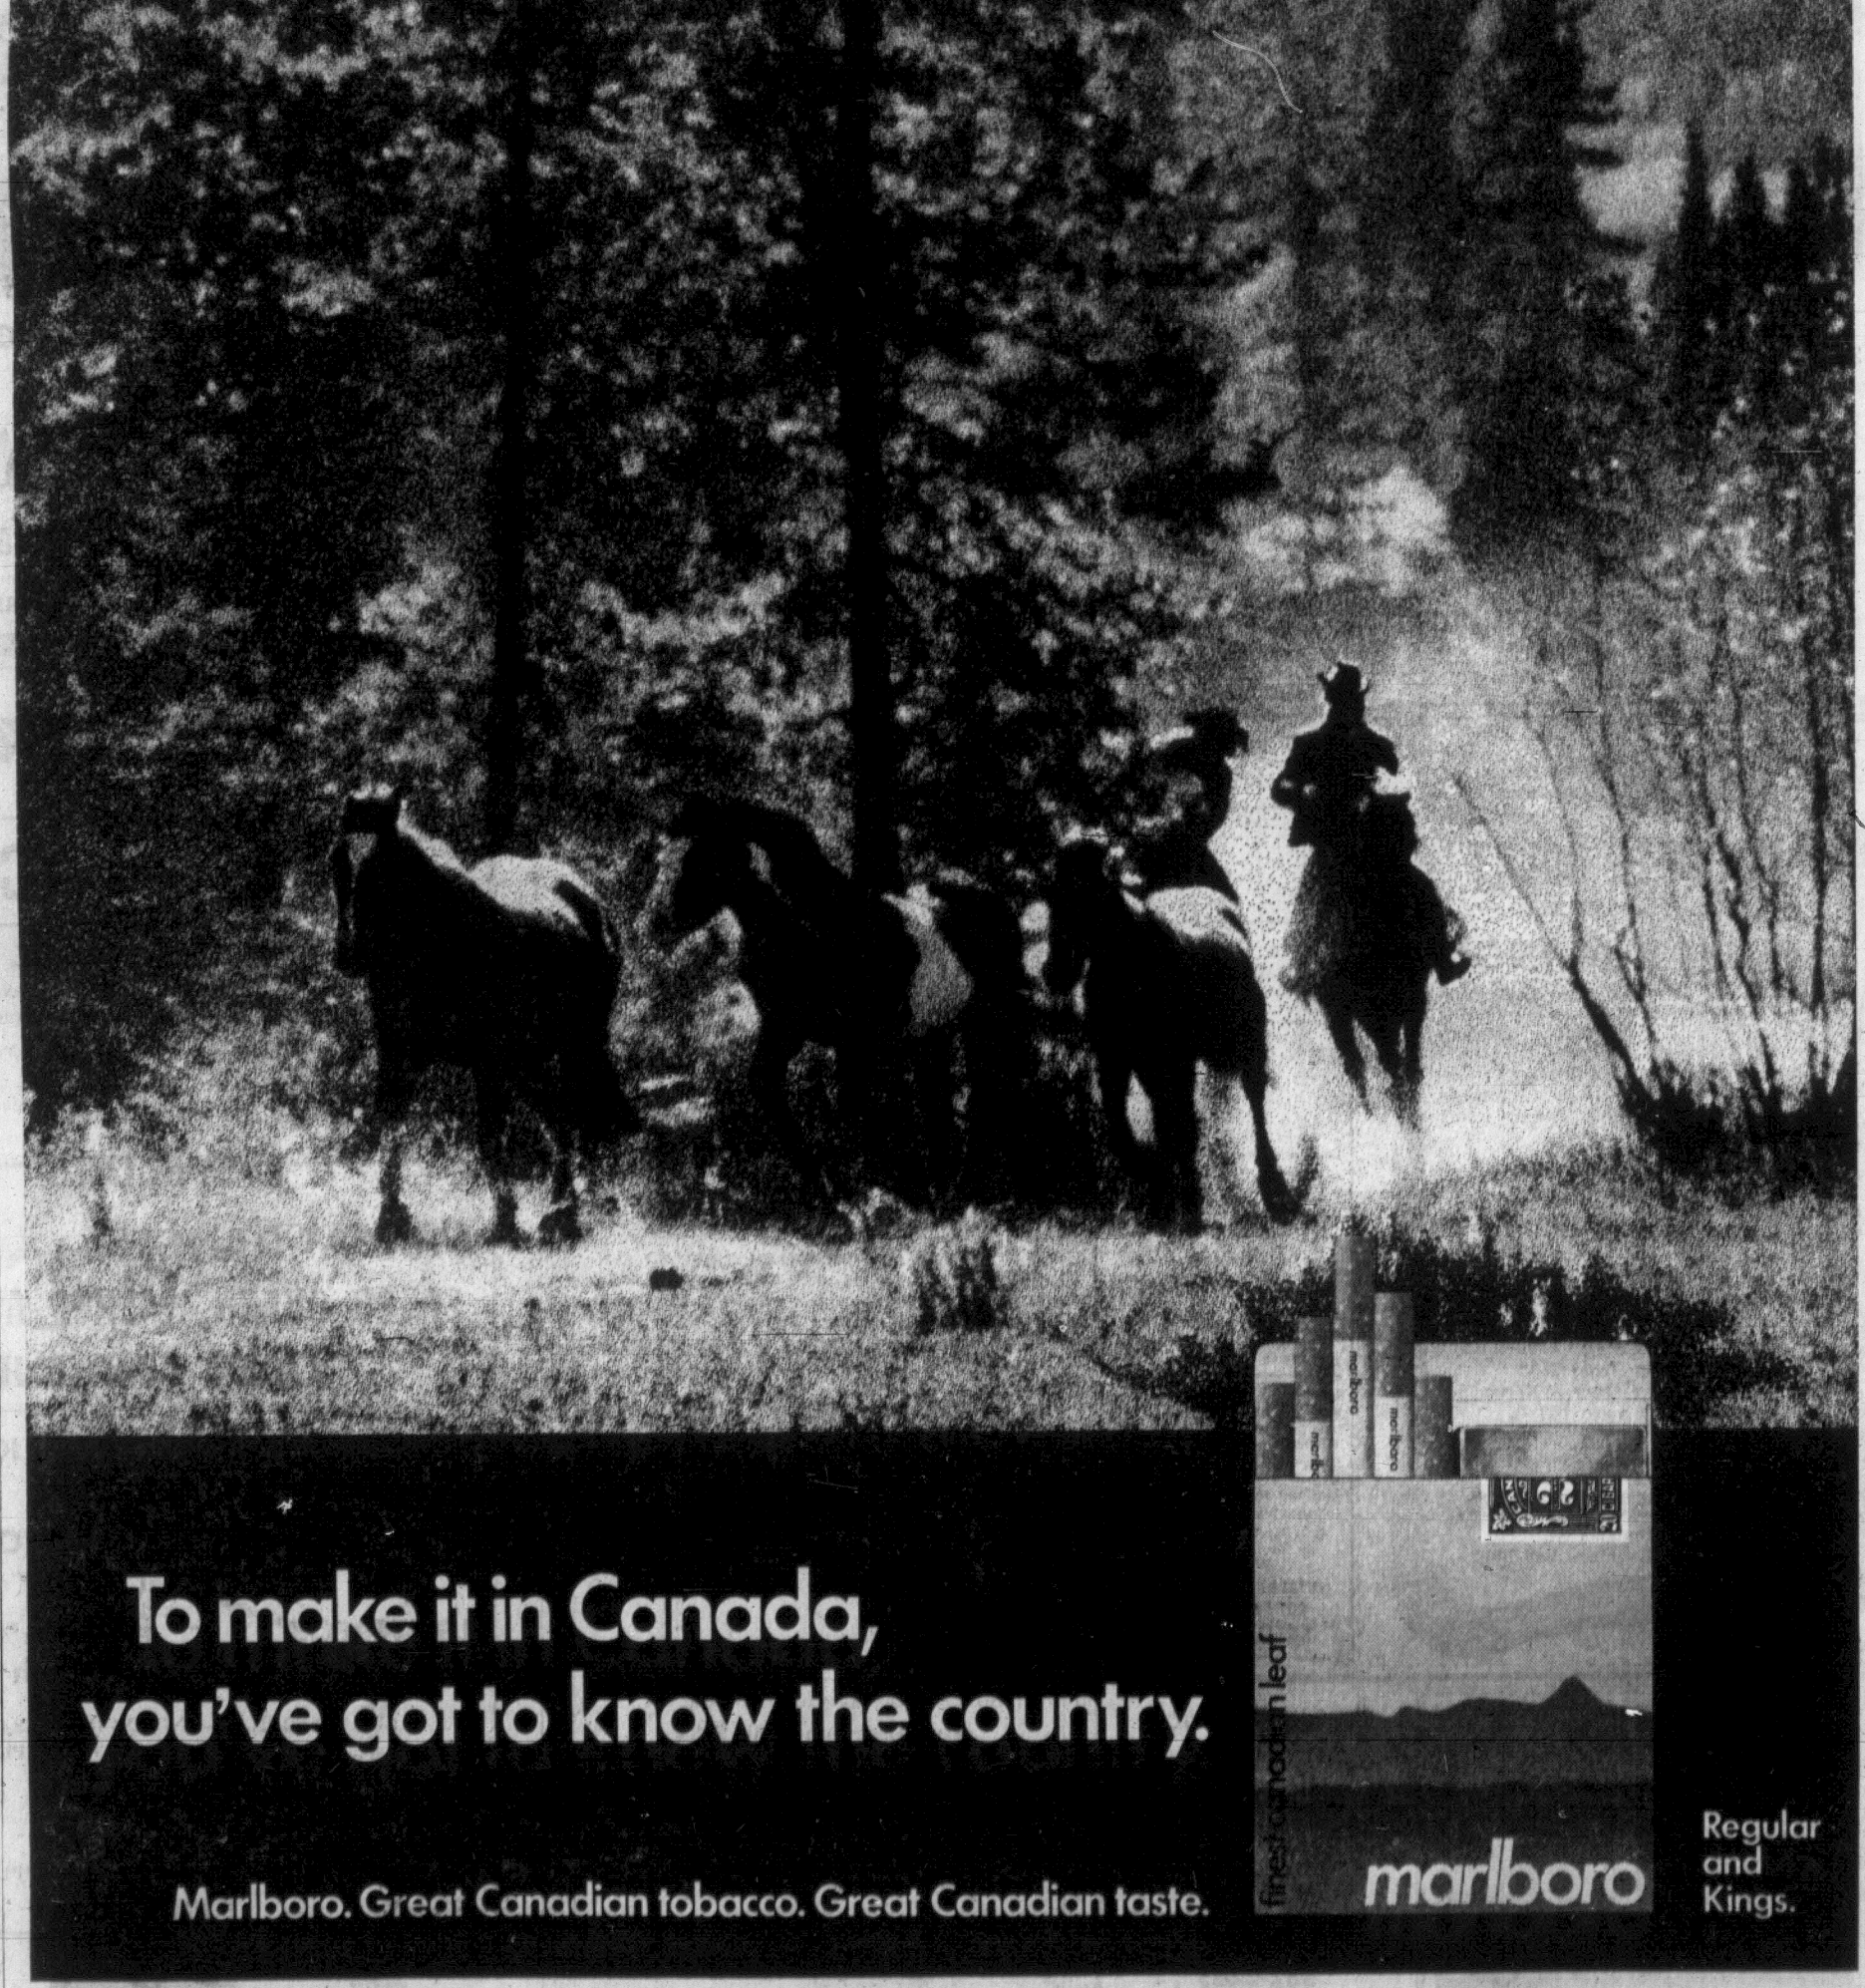

Jan Van Eesteren said in an interview that "they are aware of our equipment and we are in continuous negotiation with them on other applications of our equipment."

The Quebec government now has several Polaroid machines which make identification cards with the bearer's photograph for security guards and civil servants. Each machine cost $3,610.

Polaroid is "very much interested" in reports that the Quebec government is considering such a system, Van Eesteren said, but Polaroid knew no more about the system under consideration than has appeared in the press.

Racer Charged

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Racing car driver George Eaton of Toronto, charged with speeding on Highway 400 near here, was remanded in traffic court to next March 9. Provincial police charged Eaton with doing 90 miles an hour in a 60-miles-an-hour zone last Sept. 29.

Prisoner's Death Sparks Reform Call

BY STEVE HUME

A coroner's jury recommended Wednesday night that the provincial government overhaul the Mental Health Act to get speedier treatment and more efficient psychiatric facilities for prisoners.

The six-man jury deliberated 65 minutes after hearing evidence from the final four witnesses at the third session of an inquest into the death of Wilkinson Road inmate James Oliver Erdman, Oct. 19.

The jury ruled that Erdman died from skull fractures, extensive brain damage and internal injuries suffered when he jumped head-first some 35 feet to a concrete floor at the jail.

NOT SUICIDE

It ruled that the 23-year-old man, who was serving an eight-month sentence for assaulting a police officer, did not commit suicide, but killed himself "while the balance of his mind was disturbed."

"We recommend that psychiatric facilities and personnel be made available at all times upon the request of the attending medical staff, to any individual serving sentence.

"We recommend that the Mental Health Act of British Columbia be revised to accommodate the previous recommendation," the jury told St. Jorre.

PARANOIA

Previous evidence from medical personnel revealed that although Erdman was suffering recurring psychosis in the form of drug-induced hallucinations and paranoia, he was never seen or treated by a psychiatrist.

When Erdman had been transferred to Oakalla with a view to having him treated at Riverview mental hospital, he was treated by a general practitioner for 10 days, sedated and sent back.

The jury had been told Erdman was not eligible for treatment by a Riverview psychiatrist until he had been committed under the Mental Health Act.

'BLOWN MIND'

But he could not be committed under the act unless he had first seen a psychiatrist. And there was no psychiatrist available to prisoners such as Erdman.

The jury had also been told earlier that Erdman's mental illness had been caused by excessive use of hallucinogenic drugs which had "literally blown his mind."

Wednesday night the jury heard from two witnesses who gave evidence at to the gravity of Erdman's illness.

The Rev. Harold Gordon Walker, part-time Anglican chaplain at the Wilkinson Road jail, said he had recognized early that "Jim Erdman was a man in great need of help and was seeking help."

'COULDN'T BEAR IT'

He said the excessive use of drugs had damaged Erdman's mental balance and that a subsequent separation and divorce proceeding by his wife had added to the emotional burden.

"He could stand life no longer . . . He couldn't bear it," Walker said.

"He spoke of the snakes in his mind. He spoke of the great terror in his mind. He spoke of the Devil possessing him. He said that God and the Devil were battling over him and that God was too weak to win."

'IT IS MISTAKE'

The chaplain told the jury he thought "it is a mistake to throw drunks in jail or to throw drug people in jail.

"Somehow, somewhere we have to do something to help the people of our society who are in trouble."

He called for better psychiatric facilities and more "cooperation between the services that minister to people."

Former Wilkinson Road inmate Henry Streit of Duncan gave evidence that he became aware of bizarre behavior by Erdman and requested aid from prison officials.

They were sympthetic, he said, but their hands were tied with the red tape of the Mental Health Act.

Streit said he became concerned when Erdman started following individuals around all day mimicking their every motion and staring at them.

EXPLORER'S VISIT DOUBTED

Juan de Fuca Name in Dire Straits

By BOB MITCHELL

It would be ironic indeed if Victoria's new community college was named after a Greek pilot called Apostolos Valerianos — better remembered as Juan de Fuca.

For many years historians have doubted de Fuca even saw the entrance to the strait that bears his name.

More recently, however, local residents with a talent for association did a double take over a proposal to name southern Vancouver Island's newest educational institution after the pilot.

The college was tentatively named Juan de Fuca College in getting it approved by voters in an October plebiscite.

It has been pointed out the name doesn't lend itself to things like headlines, college cheers or sweatshirts.

School board chairman Carron Jameson said one of the first tasks of the college council will be to select a permanent name.

He said other suggestions include Quadra, Thunderbird, De Cosmos, Victoria and Laporte, but added he likes Juan de Fuca.

"I have heard people say it might propose rude remarks, but I was rather astonished to hear that," Jameson said.

Allan McCallum, acting principal of the Institute of Adult Studies, said students and teachers are "generally averse" to naming the college after the Greek pilot.

"The name Juan de Fuca has some merit, and if pronounced properly could be quite appropriate," he said.

Cory Holob, who will sit on the college council as superintendent of the Saanich Peninsula school district, said he had "no positive or negative reaction" to Juan de Fuca, but commented:

"I understand it basically has some dangers embodied in it — in terms of young people."

Trustee Daphne Temple of the Greater Victoria school board would like to see the college called Camosun, which was the name of the Indian village at the present site of Victoria before the arrival of white settlers.

"I would like to see an Indian name, not a Spanish name," she said. "Now they can't even prove he (de Fuca) was up here."

Engaged in the service of the viceroy of New Spain (Mexico), de Fuca was apparently sent north on a voyage of exploration along the Pacific coast in 1592.

Back in Venice a few years later, the pilot said the strait he claimed to have discovered about 47 degrees north of the equator was the much sought-after northwest passage to the Atlantic Ocean.

Historians have speculated he either made the story up or got it from the Indians along the coast.

Haddock Raps Other Councils For Aid Abuse

Mayor Courtney Haddock today asked why other Greater Victoria municipalities are not spending their $1 per capita provincial tourism grant to aid tourist promotion.

Haddock said he agrees with Premier Bennett who said Wednesday the grant should not be used for other purposes.

Victoria uses its grant properly, Haddock maintains.

'REDIRECT GRANT'

Haddock said Victoria is an established tourist area and the provincial grant should be "redirected" from the Visitors Bureau towards reinforcing actual tourist attractions.

Without naming the other Greater Victoria municipalities, Haddock said: "If the tourist industry is so lucrative to businessess here, why don't all municipalities turn over that grant to the Visitor's Bureau — in full"

Asked if Victoria pays its provincial grant to the bureau, Haddock said "I think it's paying more than its share."

Premier Bennett warned Wednesday he might take some action if the $1 per capita grant is not spent on tourism.

HADDOCK RAPPED

Deputy Travel Industry Minister Ron Worley and Visitors bureau president Pat Frumento had also criticized Hayor Haddock for saying the bureau should be scrapped.

Haddock said today he thinks the bureau "is doing a good job, but the job is not necessary." He said the "bulk" of the bureau's budget goes to salaries.

The bureau's girls "work like beavers" to send out "97,000 pieces of mail to 97,000 visitors who are already in the city."

The bureau's money should "not be wasted in scatter-shot advertisements in the United States."

The redirected tourist grant could go towards upgrading Craigdarroch Castle or into expanding and improving the Sunset Ceremony.

Haddock reiterated his earlier statements that a user's tax imposed on hotel rooms would be a fairer way to pay for extra tourist promotion than spreading the load on the homeowner.

He also said the Visitors Bureau work "could easily be done by private enterprise."

At present the industry itself is only providing a "fraction" of the cost of the bureau.

"If the tourist industry is so lucrative, so vibrant, so important — on the top of the list — why don't they look after themselves. Why don't they close ranks and do something for themselves?"

'APPALLING'

"It seems appalling to me that the mayor should insult the people who do work hard in the tourist industry — and there are very few of them."

Worley, developing a theme established earlier Wednesday by Bennett, said Victoria not only may be using the grant for other purposes but a municipal business tax increase for tourist purposes of a few years ago now appears to be largely absorbed by general revenue.

Bennett's office released figures saying visitors to B.C. this year increased by 11 per cent.

House Costs Rise Ahead of Incomes

Incomes have not kept up with the cost of housing, a seminar on housing was told this morning.

J. Everett Brown, chairman of the B.C. Housing Management Commission, said incomes have roughly tripled between 1947 and 1967 while the general price level has doubled.

But the housing cost has probably increased by about four times "and this has really brought about the crunch."

Brown, the retired deputy municipal affairs minister in British Columbia, said the point has been reached where a new look must be taken at housing.

He listed these factors in the increased costs:

1. Land. While there is no scarcity in the physical sense (urban land in B.C. occupies less than ½ of 1 per cent of all land), the price of land increases as the number of persons per acre rises. Lot frontages used to be 40 feet, now they are 60, 70 and 80 feet. If there are three lots per acre against 12, the price of land is four times as much;

2. Services. Cost of most municipal services is proportional to the miles of street frontages and therefore the tax load. Brown said "we have to accept we either forego something else for 80 foot frontages or we settle for smaller frontages;"

INTEREST RATE UP

3. Building costs. There have been increases in the efficiency of on-site labor. He "suspected" that construction workers wages have increased faster than others. He suggested "we may have to settle for cheaper design. Ranch houses may be very nice but perhaps we can't really afford them;"

4. Financing. Twenty-five years ago there were 4½ per cent mortgages. Today the interest rate is 10½ per cent. This increase alone is 40 per cent, he said, but financing costs run to six times as much because a "very much larger" sum has to be borrowed.

Briefly discussing rental public housing for people, Brown said there is no way of eliminating poverty unless incomes are distributed equally and he didn't know of any country which does this.

There was "nothing peculiar" about people at the low end of the income scale, housing.

The housing seminar, at the Empress Hotel, was sponsored by the Capital Region branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada. It ended this afternoon.

Hearing Dates On Murder Set for Trio

Preliminary hearing dates for three men charged with the non-capital murder of part-time cabdriver Gerald Mulholland were set today in Victoria Provincial Court.

Judge William Ostler set aside Dec. 23, 28, and 29 for the trio, William Larlham, 20, of CFB Esquimalt, Terrance Parsons, 20, of 1339 Newport and Gary Smith, 18, of CFB Esquimalt.

Mayor Won't Let Reid Interest Go

Mayor Courtney Haddock said today he is "not going to let the Reid interest leave Victoria."

Just returned from a trip to Vancouver to see developer J. A. Reid, Haddock said he had confirmed another meeting with Reid for Dec. 15.

Wednesday's meeting was "very satisfactory," he said, but declined to discuss details.

Asked if a newly-formed council after the Dec. 12 election might change his position, Haddock said it wouldn't.

A new council "doesn't change economics, philosophy, or certainly the policy of the city," Haddock said.

"I am not going to let the Reid interest leave Victoria — not if I can help it."

Civil Servants Dislike Contract

Close to 1,000 federal employees in Greater Victoria, members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, got the word on an arbitrated new contract Wednesday and it left them unhappy.

They will receive salary increases of 7 per cent, effective Oct. 1, 1968 and two increases of 6 per cent each, effective Oct. 1 of last year and this year. Their new contract ends Nov. 23, 1971.

The arbitration settlement, announced in Ottawa, covers 22,000 skilled and semi-skilled tradesmen in the federal public service across the country.

Locally, the employees involved work at HMC Dockyard, the Rocky Point arsenal and government's facilities at Patricia Bay.

Machinists, drivers, heavy equipment operators, ammunition workers, woodworkers, mechanics and electricians are among the trade groups involved.

"They're not happy with it," was the way regional representative Tom Dalzell summarized the reaction today.

He joined William Doherty, the Alliance's first vice-president, in noting the arbitration award fails to take into account wages being paid in similar fields outside the public service.

WHEN WE LAST WENT up the Island Highway, autumn was deepening and a phenomenon grown familiar through a long summer had all but vanished.

This was the young wanderer companioned or alone. His tribe took to the long roads of Canada in numbers not matched since the Depression.

Distance was no barrier. They travelled by thumb with their worldly goods in their packsacks. Some were looking for work in a year when jobs were hard to find. But very many others were simply out to see the country in a summer that went on as if it could never end.

The provincial camps knew them. Freeman "Skipper" King—never a man to turn youth away—made room for them in jam-packed Goldstream park, and found them better guests than many a vacationist on wheels.

(Park naturalist King will not thank me for telling you this, but a New York girl in road-worn boots once kissed him goodbye, smack on a leathery cheek.)

Up at Campbell River on a rainy night, a resident prodded an offering into a Goodwill bin. She squeaked when her fingers encountered fur. But it wasn't a bear that had inserted itself into the hutch — merely a bearded hitchhiker who had found a place to lay his head.

Where are they now? Gone, most of them. Scattered to their home-cities across the land. The Victoria Cool-aid intake, which averaged over 60 a night all through the summer and once in September reached 82, descended sharply as fall set in.

Most of the roving young who remain are on their own and still looking for work to tide them through the winter. And, in this year of poor prospects, not finding it.

BEACON HILL'S Queenie is gone now, this life departed after worthy service and a tranquil retirement. But one day as she stood plump and placid in the enclosure she shared with other park creatures a three-year-old boy gave Queenie the eye.

He said to his mother, "Look at the big deer."

Mrs. Frances D. Watts of 411 Pendergast Street offers this anecdote to underline a point.

"It would be ridiculous if our children knew what a whale looked like," she writes, "but had never seen a horse."

With that in mind, Mrs. Watts hopes the sturdy Tally-ho steeds won't be exiled from our scene. She also offers an idea which as another of the late Queenie's admirers, I'm glad to pass on.

"Perhaps," she suggests (looking hopefully to Victoria parks branch) "another retired horse will be found to take over Queenie's important work of letting our very young people know what a real live horse lookes like."

Sound horse-sense, and I'm all for it.

THE NEXT BEST THING to fishing is viewing a good film on the subject. I can report with pleasure that Victoria newspaperman Ian Street and wife Pauline have produced a dandy.

Coho on the Fly, they've titled it, and I found it a color documentary with a difference.

Though its finned heroes are the tackle-straining coho salmon of Cowichan Bay's fall run, the concentration isn't all on strike, battle and capture. There are lovely shots of valley, bay and river. The camera pauses for a sunrise viewed from the Malahat. It tracks an eagle, lingers on a blue heron, and indulges in some man-overboard comic relief.

Also, there's a theme song — Valley of the Sun, with music by Alex Young of the Legislative Press Gallery and lyric by Mrs. Street.

The coho sequences, with master fisherman and lure-maker Bruce Colegrave on the rod, are among the finest I've ever seen.

This is the third production by Village Films, name chosen by the Streets for their partnership. They're hoping it will be bought as a sponsored special.

What rocks me is that Ian — one of the separated brethren who toil for The Daily What's-its-Name next door — is not himself a fisherman. In view of the superlatively good job he's done on Coho, that passeth understanding!

MAJOR OCEANOGRAPHIC INSTITUTE

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Vancouver appears to have the edge over Victoria as the site of a major oceanographic institute, it was learned today.

A survey two years ago proposed that Victoria is the more logical location on the basis of logistics involving best use of research ships and also that the fisheries biological station is located at Nanaimo.

But today, W. M. Cameron, director of the marine sciences branch, in Ottawa said location of an institute near scientific and "particularily marine industries" is more important than immediate proximity to its ships.

Dr. Cameron's statement came on the heels of a recommendation by the Science Council of Canada Wednesday that urgent priority by given creation of a West Coast counterpart of the Bedford Oceanographic Institute near Halifax.

A study by federal government agencies during the coming year will decide the proposed research centre's location and size, said Cameron.

The government has begun development of a Canada Centre for Inland Waters at Burlington, Ont., which amalgamates multi-disciplinary personnel into a new type of centre involving water, weather, pollution, economic, hydrographic and even social science experts.

Involve All Facets of Research

This greatly-expanded type of institute is now being considered for the West Coast, undertaking all facets of research connected with fresh and salt water on the Pacific and western Arctic Ocean coasts as well as deep-sea research.

Dr. Cameron said such a centre might find its location near scientific "and particularly marine industries" more important than immediate proximity to its ships.

"Besides two universities and the oceanographic group at the University of B.C., the Vancouver area has the full range of marine industries which would be extremely important to a multi-disciplinary centre and Victoria has almost none," he said.

"This is one of the things that will have to be looked into pretty closely over the next year."

The government already has pulled about a dozen fisheries experts from Nanaimo to temporary quarters in Vancouver Harbor while awaiting hard decisions on the West Coast program which was to follow completion of the $25 million inland waters centre at Burlington in 1972.

From Okanagan to St. John River

The Burlington centre ultimately will accommodate up to 1,000 staff scientists and technicians, visiting professors and students undertaking research into such questions as the cost-benefit ratio of various municipal sewage treatment techniques to documenting stream flow rates.

It's area of operations would cover the interior from the Okanagan Lakes to the St. John River and from the Mackenzie Delta to the U.S. boundary.

It has been operating since its creation two years ago out of 50 mobile trailers at Burlington. The first of the permanent complex of four major buildings was officially opened last week. The trailer laboratories will be re-used for field studies.

The original intent was to begin serious planning of a West Coast institute after the Burlington centre was finished — providing a lead time of about five years for its development. Expansion of the Bedford Institute into a multi-disciplinary complex was to follow.

But the science council's recommendation urged drastic speed-up of the West Coast project as part of a massive increase in marine programs.

Dr. Cameron said the impending study will have to determine whether this is feasible. It also will have to examine such questions as the exact scope of disciplines and geography to be assigned to the West Coast institute and how to fit it into the government re-organization involved in establishing a department of environmental affairs.

AGED CARDINALS HIT BACK AT POPE

ROME (UPI) — Two cardinals barred from any future role in governing the Roman Catholic Church because of age hit back today at Pope Paul VI. One implied the pontiff was a sick man.

French Cardinal Eugene Tisserant, 86, dean of the 127-man College of Cardinals, said it was "public knowledge" the Pope was so feeble or ill eight days ago that aides had to help him from his weekly general audience in St. Peter's Basilica.

Italian Cardinal Alfredo Ottaviani, 80, former head of the Vatican department for the Doctrine of the Faith (the former holy office), accused the pope of contemptuously overriding church tradition barring from Vatican administrative duties Cardinals who have passed the age of 80.

Bennett Says PM 'Caused Crisis'

Times News Services

Premier Bennett today lashed out at Prime Minister Trudeau, blaming him for "Canada's greatest crisis" in Quebec.

It was Bennett's first real statement on the recent wave of terrorism in Quebec and it came in angry response to a report that Trudeau had told B.C. Liberals that the way to stop the flooding of the Skagit Valley is to fire Bennett.

Asked about the report on his way to cabinet today, Bennett snapped:

"Oh yes, Mr. Trudeau knows full well that he and his Liberals made an awful mess in the province of Quebec and created Canada's greatest crisis.

WILD STATEMENTS

"I give him credit for the action he took when things got desperate but he is to blame for that and these kind of wild statements by Trudeau are just to take the attention of the Canadian people and the people of British Columbia. . . ."

Asked what Trudeau should have done to avoid a crisis in Quebec, Bennett replied:

"Well the situation is this — his policies have been like driving a horse with the whip in one hand and the reins in the other, the one hand not knowing what the other doeth, trying to spend money in Quebec at the same time creating tight money, high interest rates and killing employment.

"The very fact that he created unemployment made for conditions in Quebec and led to this difficulty."

Victorians Sympathetic To Change

Victoria interests were charitable today toward indications from Ottawa that the proposed oceanographic institute may be located in Vancouver, instead of here as originally planned.

David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, noted that the government had promised on three separate occasions that Victoria would be site of the institute.

"But if, as indicated, the institute in its final form is a much bigger project than originally planned, there may be good reasons for considering a new site as well," Anderson said.

MONEY ISSUE

"If there are reasons, like saving the Canadian taxpayers money, I'll listen to them." He said Victoria already is beneficiary of "lots" of federal spending, while Vancouver has "very, very little."

Uvic biologist Dr. Mark Bell said the decision to make the institute a vastly enlarged, multi-disciplinary centre was an encouraging development.

"In a venture of this magnitude, you have to go where the talent is," Bell said. "As nice as it would be to have the institute associated with our university, it may be necessary to deny parochial views in the national interest.

BOON TO CANADA

"Such an enlarged institute would be a boon generally to Canada and the West."

Biology department head Dr. Gordon Fields said he would be disappointed if the government decides on Vancouver, after preliminary studies had strongly recommended the Esquimalt harbor area.

"We know that the Bedford Institute (the operating Nova Scotia prototype of what is planned for B.C.) has provided strong support for oceanographic and related work at Dalhousie University in Halifax," Fields said.

"We had hoped for similar co-operative development here." There are two biolo-

'HE REFUSED TO CO-OPERATE'

RCMP Quizzing Doctor

By STEVE HUME

A Canadian doctor being questioned in connection with the Pachena Bay murder of Gordon Kralt has so far refused to talk to three RCMP detectives, San Francisco police said today.

"He refused to co-operate with them yesterday. Whether he will co-operate with them today remains to be seen," a San Francisco police official said in a telephone interview.

He said Dr. Glen Stewart, 43, who had been living in a San Francisco apartment under the name of Campbell since Nov. 10, is being held in the city prison.

"The charge is: hold for immigration authorities, but he is being questioned by three RCMP detectives."

Two of the RCMP officers have been identified as Cpl. M. H. Nelson and Const. William Erickson. The third officer is a Prince Rupert sergeant investigating the disappearance of a British Columbia woman, according to a police spokesman in that city.

The police official said he had no information to verify or deny reports that U.S. immigration authorities intended to escort Stewart to the Canadian border and turn him over to RCMP.

"We're still trying to find out what they intend to do ourselves," he said.

Stewart tried to kill himself Tuesday when two immigration inspectors arrived at his apartment in an attempt to determine whether he was lawfully in the United States.

The doctor slammed and barricaded his door and tried to gas himself and a woman companion, 31-year-old Maria Trigiani, by turning on the kitchen stove and breaking off the controls.

The two were rescued by the immigration men who broke into the apartment through a window.

Kralt, 23-year-old caretaker at the Shantyman's Christian Association camp on Pachena Bay, dropped from sight Oct. 23. His decomposed body was found Sunday 600 yards from the lodge where he lived.

The former Duncan resident apparently was shot to death.

Raiders Missed Cells

SAIGON (UPI) — Hanoi Radio warned today that the United States "will have to bear the full responsibility for the lives of the American pilots" in any commando raids on prisoner of war camps in North Vietnam.

Broadcasts by the official North Vietnamese radio monitored in Saigon claimed again that a "number" of captured American pilots were wounded in last weekend's raid. The broadcasts revived speculation that the 50-man commando team that landed in the Son Tay POW compound may have missed cells where the Americans were being held by several hundred yards or less.

Spokesmen in Saigon refused to comment on the broadcast in keeping with normal U.S. policy.

Five at Large After Prison Break

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — Eleven prisoners escaped from Prince Albert penitentiary Wednesday night and five described as dangerous were still at large today.

It was the second mass escape from the penitentiary in three months. Seven men escaped Aug. 24 but all were recaptured.

Three men involved in the August escape were among those who fled Wednesday night — Robert Desjarlais, 28, Douglas Letendre, 26, and Wilfred Eadie, 22. Desjarlais remained at large, while the other two were recaptured along with Stanley Whittaker, 25, Harry Lewis, 24, and Peter Harrison, 31.

The five were arrested at an RCMP roadblock 20 miles south of the city.

Ronald Twerdoclib, 19, who was serving a life sentence for murder, surrendered today.

The five still at large all have long criminal records filled with violence, Warden John Norfield said.

It is believed the men escaped after cutting holes in a wire fence during a recreation period.

Bail Reply Next Week

MONTREAL (CP) — A bail application by lawyer Robert Lemieux, charged with seditious conspiracy and membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec, was taken under advisement today until next week.

Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay of Court of Queen's Bench told Lemieux: "I will do my best to render a decision by the beginning of next week."

Armies of Beggars Steal Aid Supplies

BHOLA (Reuter) — The official casualty toll in the cyclone and tidal wave disaster which struck East Pakistan two weeks ago rose to 200,000 as relief workers coped today with a new problem — armies of ragged beggars stealing supplies destined for survivors.

The beggars are descending on the coastal strip ravaged by the wind and wall of water which hit it Nov. 13, grabbing food and blankets being delivered for the starving survivors. Flat-bottomed British and American boats began ferrying the supplies to the stricken area Wednesday.

The official fatality toll of 200,000 included more than 175,000 confirmed dead and nearly 25,000 missing and presumed dead. On the shattered island of Bhola, President Yahya Khan spent the night after a day-long tour of the worst hit areas, himself handing out food and blankets to sobbing men, women and children.

Yahya heard the martial law administrator of the government demand immediate trials of officials who he said have been charging money to victims of the storm before food is delivered.

"We are doing our damnedest," said Yahya.

Egyptians 'On Alert'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The newspaper Al Jarida reported today that Egypt has put its land, air and naval forces on maximum alert to face a "warlike" Israeli buildup of troops and armor east of the Suez Canal.

The newspaper's Cairo correspondent said the Israeli buildup was revealed by recent Egyptian spy flights over the Sinai Desert.

Rhodesia Copies Apartheid

SALISBURY (Reuter) — The Rhodesian government announced today details of a controversial apartheid-style bill allowing for the banishment of non-whites from white residential areas.

The new legislation also will — for the first time in Rhodesia's history — provide for setting up an official South African-type classification tribunal to decide a person's race.

Publication of the long-awaited bill by Premier Ian Smith's government dealt another heavy blow to slender hopes that new contacts between London and Salisbury could make any progress toward a settlement of the Anglo-Rhodesian independence deadlock.

Rhodesia broke away from Britain over British insistence of majority rule in a predominantly-black country, and proclaimed its independence Nov. 11, 1965. Rhodesia severed its links with the Crown last year when it became a republic.

HICKEL TOOK JOB 'TOO SERIOUSLY'

MORTON

HICKEL

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Conservationists who were horrified at the appointment of Walter J. Hickel as interior secretary two years ago were even more horrified Wednesday when President Nixon abruptly fired him — after Hickel refused to resign.

The official White House explanation, after a half-hour meeting between the president and Hickel, was a lack of "mutual confidence."

Environment-minded observers in Congress and conservation groups put more specific interpretation on it: Hickel took his job seriously, was too independent, and so became a maverick in the Nixon administration.

NEW APPOINTMENT

There was little comment, however, on the president's announced intention to appoint Representative Rogers C. B. Morton of Maryland, chairman of the Republican national committee, to the interior post.

Authoritative sources here said Morton had known for more than a week that he would be the next secretary of interior. The towering (6-foot-7) congressman conferred with both President Nixon and Attorney General John Mitchell early last week and came away "90 per cent certain" that he would be taking over the interior post.

Hickel, in a brief statement, said in effect he found it impossible to play the White House kind of game.

Ronald Ziegler, White House press secretary, said of the sudden firing:
